TWENTY-EIGHTH STREET BUILDING: 1855-1872

1852 • MILESTONES • 1953

- 1852 The Jews' Hospital in New York is incorporated for "benevolent, charitable and scientific purposes." Sampson Simson is the first President.
- 1855 The new Hospital is opened on May 17th, in a four-story building with 45 beds, at 138 West 28th Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues. The original Staff of ten men includes Dr. Valentine Mott and Dr. Willard Parker. In accordance with the usage of the period, there is no separation of Medical and Surgical Services, because surgery is not considered sufficiently important; nor are there any specialized services.
- 1856 In its first full year the Hospital cares for 225 patients. Operating expenses total $5,493.
- 1862 The Hospital opens its wards to wounded Federal soldiers of the Civil War, installing additional beds and increasing its personnel for the purpose.
- 1866 To make it clear that the Hospital serves the community without distinction of race or religion, its name is changed to The Mount Sinai Hospital.
- 1868 The Ladies' Auxiliary Society is formed to assist in the work of the Hospital.
- 1872 The Hospital is moved into a new 3½-story building with a capacity of 120 beds, on Lexington Avenue from 66th to 67th Streets.

- 1872 The Medical Board and House Staff are organized at a meeting at the home of Dr. Willard Parker, who becomes first Chairman of the Board.
- 1872 The Hospital takes a bold step forward by appointing two women to professional positions—one to the House Staff and the other as Apothecary.
- 1873 The Outdoor Dispensary (Out-Patient Department) is formally established, with four divisions: Medical, Surgical, Gynecological, and Children's.
- 1877 Reflecting the advances in surgery and increase in surgical practice, the Hospital establishes separate in-patient Medical and Surgical Services.
- 1877 An in-patient Gynecological Department is established, headed by Dr. Emil Noeggerath, pioneer in the study of gonorrhea.
- 1878 Creating a precedent among New York hospitals, a separate service for in-patient care of children is established, through a legacy from Michael Reese of California. Dr. Abraham Jacobi heads this department.
- 1879 An Eye and Ear Service is organized, headed by Dr. Emil Gruening, who in 1888 performs one of the early mastoid operations in America.
- 1880 Dr. Arpad G. Gerster, early champion of Listerian surgery, is appointed Attending Surgeon.
- 1881 The School of Nursing is established, one of the country's pioneer nurses' training institutions. There are eight students when the School opens.
- 1883 Dr. Alfred Meyer begins the Hospital's Medical Library and looks after it for more than a decade when a Committee of the Medical Board is appointed to develop it further as the future Abraham Jacobi Library.
- 1883 The Hospital building is enlarged to a capacity of 190 beds, and an isolation building is added. Space for private patients is increased, indicating the emergence of the modern hospital as a medical center for all instead of an institution for the poor only.
- 1883 Dr. Edward Gamaliel Janeway, one of the great diagnosticians of his time, is appointed to the Staff.
- 1886 The Hospital grants its diploma to Dr. Josephine Walter, first woman in America to serve a formal internship.
- 1886 To relieve overcrowding of the Hospital and to care for patients who can be treated at home, a District Medical Service is organized, first of its kind in the city.
- 1890 The Out-Patient Department is greatly expanded, housed in a new building. Neurological, skin, and venereal disease clinics are established.
- 1893 The Laboratory is established, housed in a cloak room "not much larger than a bird's cage."
- 1895 The Genitourinary Service is established, with Dr. William F. Fluhrer as its first chief.

- 1900 The Hospital purchases its first X-ray machine.
- 1901 The cornerstone of the present group of hospital buildings is laid on May 22nd with Mayor Seth Low among the distinguished participants. The original ten buildings have a bed capacity of 456.
- 1904 The new Hospital buildings are dedicated on March 15th.
- 1905 A Department of Dietetics is established.
- 1906 The Social Service is formed, one of the earliest hospital services of this type in the country.
- 1909 An independent Otological Service is established.
- 1910 The Dental Department for in-patients is established—extended to the Out-Patient Department in 1925.
- 1910 The Hospital begins post-graduate medical instruction. Under-graduate medical instruction to students attending two of the city's medical schools had preceded it by several years.
- 1913 A large building program is initiated. Funds are collected for the Children's Pavilion and Dispensary, Private Pavilion, Laboratory Building, Director's Home, and Employees' Dormitory.
- 1916 Mount Sinai organizes Base Hospital No. 3 of the United States Army Medical Corps. In 1918, 24 physicians, 50 nurses, and 153 enlisted personnel serve with this Unit at Vauclaire, France.
- 1916 The Social Service Auxiliary is formed by women volunteers who attend to many wants of convalescent patients and of patients' families.
- 1917 The Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies is organized, with Mount Sinai as one of its constituents.
- 1920 The Psychiatry Clinic, one of the earliest in a general hospital, is established.
- 1922 The Private Pavilion, the Children's Pavilion, and the Blumenthal Auditorium are opened.
- 1924 The Occupational Therapy Department is established.
- 1925 A beginning is made toward establishment of an endowment fund for support of medical research, hitherto precariously dependent on occasional donations.
- 1927 The new building of the School of Nursing is completed, accommodating 476 residents.
- 1931 The Consultation Service is established, providing diagnostic service by specialists for patients of moderate means referred by their own physicians.
- 1931 The Semi-Private Pavilion is opened, increasing the capacity of the Hospital to over 800 beds. Group nursing, providing 24-hour nursing care at a much reduced cost, is introduced in this Pavilion.

- 1932 A separate Neurosurgical Service is created.
- 1933 To keep up the morale of convalescent patients, unemployed because of the depression, the Social Service Workroom is established.
- 1933 The Out-Patient Department building is modernized.
- 1934 The Journal of The Mount Sinai Hospital is established. It is distributed to universities and medical libraries throughout the world.
- 1935 The Medical and Surgical Pavilions are modernized.
- 1936 The Neustadter Home in Yonkers is affiliated with the Hospital as its institution for convalescents.
- 1936 The Isolation Ward is rebuilt and becomes the first in the city approved by the Department of Health for private patients.
- 1938 The Blood Bank is established under the direction of the Department of Hematology.
- 1939 Radiotherapy is separated from Roentgenology and established as an independent department.
- 1940 The Third General Hospital of the United States Army is organized at the invitation of the War Department.
- 1940 The Hospital collects blood plasma for Britain from volunteer donors. At the close of 1944, over sixteen thousand people had volunteered as donors to the Hospital's own Blood Bank.
- 1942 The Third General Hospital of the United States Army is activated and leaves in 1943 for service in North Africa, Italy, and France.
- 1943 Semi-Private facilities are provided for children.
- 1944 The Greater Mount Sinai Development Fund is initiated for a post-war building and research program.
- 1944 Full-time positions are created in the Hospital for a Director of Medical Education and a Director of Clinical Research.
- 1945 The Third General Hospital returns from duty overseas.
- 1945 A separate Psychiatry Service is established and Dr. M. Ralph Kaufman is appointed Psychiatrist to the Hospital.
- 1946 Physicians, nurses, employees, and trustees who had served with the Armed Forces numbered nearly 900 before the end of hostilities.
- 1947 A separate Psychiatric Ward is opened.
- 1948 Greater Mount Sinai Hospital Development building program is initiated. Ground broken for three buildings — the Maternity Pavilion, the Central Laboratory Building and the Berg Institute of Research, and work is begun on central kitchens.
- 1949 The Hospital appoints Dr. Horace L. Hodes full-time Chief of Pediatrics. A new Pediatric Laboratory is built with funds of the Dorothy H. and Lewis Rosenstiel Foundation.

- 1950 The Board of Trustees creates the position of full-time surgeon and full-time neuropathologist.
- 1951 Exterior construction is completed of the Maternity Pavilion, Atran Laboratory and Berg Institute of Research.
Dr. Alexander B. Gutman is appointed full-time Director of Medicine.

The Premature Nursery is opened in November and becomes a part of the city-wide transport service for prematures. The Hospital is designated a major teaching affiliate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University.

THE REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

A HOSPITAL is perforce a growing thing and, in terms of new services and facilities for providing better care for more patients, we may record 1953 as a year of historic achievement. A fact that casts a somber shadow over what was from all other aspects a year of accomplishment is that the Hospital incurred a net loss in excess of $600,000—almost double the highest previous deficit in the Hospital's history. In 1952 and 1953, the combined net deficit exceeded $1,000,000 and reduced our general fund to $600,000, which, in the light of the Hospital's new dimensions, is perilously inadequate.

The deficit was largely attributable to the closing down for 15 months, ending last June, of the Private Pavilion. Another cause was the cost of integrating several new facilities into the overall operation. These financial burdens were anticipated by the Hospital at the time the extensive expansion was undertaken.

THE last major project in the expansion that added the Magdalene and Charles Klingenstein Pavilion, the Atran Laboratory Building, the Berg Institute of Research and other facilities, was fulfilled when the Private Pavilion was reopened after being renovated at a cost of $1,000,000. The entire lobby was redesigned, and all 131 patient rooms redecorated and refurnished. Complete new plumbing and electrical units were added. New pantries and nurses stations were built. The renovation made the Pavilion, first opened in 1922, as complete and modern as a brand new facility.

As part of Private's renovation, a Post-Operative Recovery Suite was built on the seventh floor to provide every possible device and safeguard for the patient cared for by skilled personnel while he is regaining consciousness after anesthesia. In this facility, there is a special section set aside for children, with provisions for parents to stay by their side during the recovery period.

There were two major additions to our services in which I would think friends of the Hospital might take special pride. In October we activated a premature infant nursery which soon became a key unit of the city-wide premature service functioning under auspices of the Department of Health. Occupying the entire ninth floor of the Klingenstein Pavilion, the premature infant nursery has a capacity of 41 and is one of the largest in the country.

Early in the year the Jack Martin Polio Fund, after consulting the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, pledged a sum sufficient to cover the cost of constructing a polio respirator center. By the year's end architectural plans were completed for the construction of an additional floor atop the Pediatric Pavilion to house the center.

Incredible as it may seem the city had been without a single such facility, the nearest being in Boston and Buffalo. When the pledge was forthcoming, the Hospital, with the support of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and its Greater New York Chapter, promptly converted a pediatrics teaching suite into a temporary respirator center. It opened in October, in two weeks was filled to capacity and was subsequently enlarged. Apart from its service to patients, the Center will be the focus point of an active research program and the training of the many professionals who make up the team in this field.

PERHAPS the outstanding economic factor in hospital care today is the large increase in the demand for semi-private beds by patients covered by Blue Cross insurance. To meet this problem, we began to convert a number of private rooms to two-bed semi-private rooms. The first was converted last November and since then 33 in all, providing an additional 66 semi-private beds. With the ward beds that had been previously transferred for use as Semi-Private Inclusive Rate accommodations, we have succeeded in raising the total number of semi-private beds to 239.

To bring operating room facilities more in line with the greater bed capacity, additional surgical facilities were constructed and others renovated. There is now a total of 25 operating rooms, 13 of which may be simultaneously used for major surgery.

Other construction provided safeguards against fire hazards and a new employees area including central locker rooms, and quarters for time-keeping and uniform distribution. At a cost of $150,000, all elevator shafts were enclosed in fire resistant towers, all stairways were fire-proofed, and new fire escapes and automatic fire towers were installed.

THE Atran Laboratory Building was completed and equipped during the year and readied for occupancy early in 1954. Originally this long-needed edifice was to house the Departments of Microbiology, Chemistry, Physics and Animal Research, and their subdivisions, with the Pathology Department taking over expanded quarters in the vacated Lewisohn Building. For greater efficiency and economy, however, it was decided to accommodate the Departments of Pathology and Hematology, including the Clinical Microscopy laboratories, in the new building.

With the activation of the Atran Building, and the adjoining Berg Institute of Research, the Hospital now has for the first time scientific facilities in keeping with the stature of its scientific staffs and with the scope of their diverse clinical and investigative activities.

The Hospital last year attracted more funds than ever before in support of the largest research program it has ever conducted. The year's research is given in detail in the departmental reports that follow. With such fine new facilities available to provide the tools for our staff, there is every expectation that the Hospital's research endeavors will attract ever-increasing support from foundations and individuals dedicated to the broadening of medical science's horizons.

The Hospital was honored to be designated a major teaching affiliate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, with which we have long enjoyed a mutually stimulating relationship. It would seem to be an admirable commentary on the caliber of our educational program that 30 of the first 40 applicants chosen by the Hospital as interns had named Mount Sinai as their first choice, particularly since more than a quarter of all internships in the country last year remained unfilled. For the first time, six straight surgical internships were offered in addition to the existing 30 rotating internships. These internships, too, were filled by excellent applicants.

Mrs. Walter A. Hirsch, who had served as president of the Neustadter Home for Convalescents since 1936 when it became affiliated with Mount Sinai, resigned and was succeeded by Mrs. Edwin C. Vogel. Happily, Mrs. Hirsch will continue to serve as a director of Neustadter and also as a trustee of the Hospital and as president of the Social Service Auxiliary. I can think of no more felicitous congratulatory message to Mrs. Vogel than to wish for her a continuation of the many successful years the Home enjoyed under the leadership of Mrs. Hirsch.

The Hospital and the Social Service Department suffered an enormous loss with the death of Mrs. Fanny L. Mendelsohn who, in her 31 years as Social Service Director, brought that service to a high point of performance. Mrs. Mendelsohn's abiding interest in all those whom her life's work called upon her to serve made her a leader in her field and her loss will be greatly felt.

The death of Dr. William Harris brought to a close a 30-year period during which the Hospital had the good fortune to have as its chief radiotherapist a pioneer in his field, a distinguished physician and teacher, and an inspiring personality revered by his colleagues. I record with sorrow also the death of Dr. Solon S. Bernstein, an Assistant Attending Physician who had served the Hospital loyally and skillfully since 1925.

I regret to report the resignations from the Board of Trustees of Mrs. Herbert H. Lehman, a member since 1921, and Mr. Louis Abrons who had served since 1928. I am delighted that Mrs. Lehman consented to serve as an Honorary Trustee. Elected to the Board was Mrs. David M. Levy who will, I know, bring many benefits to the Hospital by her skill and devotion.

The following appointments and promotions on the Medical Staff were made: Drs. Percy Klingenstein, Jerome L. Kohn, Asher Winkelstein and Clarence P. Oberndorf, Consultants respectively in Surgery, Pediatrics, Gastroenterology and Psychiatry; Drs. Charles K. Friedberg, Solomon Silver and Louis J. Soffer, Attending Physicians; Drs. Abram Blau and Harry I. Weinstock, Attending Psychiatrists; Dr. Samuel Karelitz, Attending Pediatrician; and Dr. Leonard J. Druckerman, Associate Attending Surgeon.

Also, Dr. Arthur J. Barsky, Associate Attending Surgeon for Plastic Surgery; Drs. Isadore E. Gerber, Henry Horn, Milton Mendlowitz, Frederick H. King, and Louis E. Siltzbach, Associate Attending Physicians; Dr. Ralph E. Moloshok, Associate Attending Pediatrician; Dr. Bernard C. Meyer, Associate Attending Psychiatrist; Dr. Jack Rapoport, Associate Attending Psychiatrist (for Child Guidance); Drs. Abraham L. Kornzweig and Frederick H. Theodore, Associate Attending Ophthalmic Surgeons; Dr. Sadao Otani, Associate Director of the Department of Pathology; and Dr. Alice I. Bernheim, Associate Pathologist.

Also, Dr. Julius J. Carr, Associate Chemist; Drs. Paul A. Kirschner and Alfred A. Pomeranz, Assistant Attending Surgeons; Dr. Bernard E. Siman, Assistant Attending Surgeon for Plastic Surgery; Drs. Marvin F. Levitt, Morton S. Bryer and Abraham G. White, Assistant Attending Physicians; Drs. Richard E.

CARING FOR POLIO PATIENTS—A LARGE RESPIRATOR CENTER IS TO BE BUILT IN 1954

Rosenfield and Stanley L. Lee, Assistant Attending Physicians for Hematology; Dr. Stephen B. Yohalem, Assistant Attending Physician (Assigned to Physics); and Dr. Albert D. Parets, Assistant Attending Physician (Assigned to Psychiatry).

Also, Drs. Robert D. London, Richard N. Reuben and Nathan Schifrin, Assistant Attending Pediatricians; Dr. Martin A. Green, Assistant Attending Neurologist; Drs. Alan H. Barnert, Robert S. Coles, Morris Feldstein and William G. Toll, Assistant Attending Ophthalmic Surgeons; Drs. Irving B. Harrison, Marcel Heiman, Aaron Stein and Martin Stein, Assistant Attending Psychiatrists; Drs. Myron Melamed and Sanford Bluestein, Assistant Attending Radiologists; and Drs. Abraham Hochberger and A. Mills Winters, Assistant Attending Anesthetists.

I HAVE attempted to summarize the salient points of the year, leaving the details to the various departments that follow. It was a year, not without its problems, but brightened by many achievements for which we are indebted to many.

I express the gratitude of the Board of Trustees to the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York, again our main source of philanthropic support, the United Hospital Fund, the Greater New York Fund, and to the many individuals, foundations and agencies which so generously contributed to the Hospital. The dedication of my fellow members of the Board of Trustees was especially evident in this important year in the Hospital's history.

I express my deepest thanks also to Dr. Martin R. Steinberg, our director, and his associate and assistants on the administrative staff; to Dr. Ralph Colp, president of the Medical Board, and our medical and professional staffs; to the Board of the School of Nursing and Miss Grace A. Warman and her associates in nursing; to the Social Service Auxiliary and the Social Service Department now directed by Miss Doris Siegel; to Mrs. Vogel and her Board and staff at Neustadter; and to all those, too numerous to mention, who worked faithfully in and for the Hospital.

ALFRED L. ROSE, President

THE CLINICAL SERVICES

ANESTHESIOLOGY

THE attending staff was increased by three assistant attendings and the resident staff was enlarged to a total of seven, as the Department experienced a sharp rise in the volume of clinical anesthesia resulting from the growing obstetrical service. By the end of the year, more than 300 obstetrical anesthetics a month were being administered, providing ample opportunity for resident training in obstetrical analgesia and infant resuscitation. We were one of the few hospitals in the country with 24-hour coverage of obstetrical anesthesia by anesthesiologists.

Increased emphasis was placed on the resident training program. Two formal meetings a week were held, including journal clubs, case studies, seminars and lectures. Members of other departments contributed generously to the lecture program. A course in nerve blocking and cadaver work was given. The growing importance of formal teaching and training of residents led to the evolution of plans for three departmental meetings a week.

The Department's clinical investigations concerned studies on the range of usefulness of Lucaine for sensory spinal analgesia in obstetrical anesthesia; the evaluation of N-allyl normorphine in the prophylaxis and treatment of asphyxia neonatorum; modification of existing field block techniques for Caesarean section and tubal ligations; the usefulness of Lucaine in short urological procedures; the application of short-acting ganglion blocking agents, such as Arfonad and Pendiamide, in hypotension anesthesia for neurosurgery; and the electrocardiographic effects of intravenous atropine and neostigmine during cyclopropane anesthesia.

The Department was represented on the programs of the annual meeting of the American Medical Association and the Post-Graduate Assembly of the State Society of Anesthesiologists. Papers published by Department members included reports on anesthetic techniques in neurosurgery, the pharmacology of pentothal sodium, an apparatus for ventricular defibrillation of the heart, and complications of endotracheal anesthesia.

DENTAL AND ORAL SURGERY

BESIDES its primary function of diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the mouth and jaws, the Service is assuming a wide range of new responsibilities, including collective studies of oral problems in patients on other services, broader teaching programs, and graduate training in the recognized specialties of dentistry.

To meet these increased demands, seven new positions were created on the attending staff. During the year, staff members served in the assigned capacities with medicine, obstetrics, anesthesiology, hematology, head and neck surgery, and in the tumor clinic.

The cleft palate rehabilitation panel completed its second year as a diagnostic and treatment-planning center of the State Department of Health. Besides the dental personnel, the group has members from pediatrics, psychiatry, plastic surgery and otolaryngology.

Graduate courses in oral diagnosis were given in affiliation with Columbia University and a series of lectures in oral pathology for the Guggenheim Foundation. The weekly seminars in oral surgery and oral pathology continued to attract many members of the local dental profession. A new residency in oral surgery was established, and approved by the American Dental Association. Seventy-two undergraduates of the dental hygiene school of the State University received three-month full-time periods of training and instruction.

With the cooperation of the Anesthesia Service, techniques were developed to facilitate the completion of extensive dental repairs in a single operating period under general anesthesia. This procedure, originally designed to manage cerebral-palsy and other handicapped children is being extended to exceptionally apprehensive patients.

Publications by the staff included an atlas of diseases of the mouth and papers on dento-facial abnormalities, patterns in growth and development of the jaws, atypical neuralgias of the face, antibiotic therapy, Gaucher's disease in the mandible, cleft palate prosthesis, operations for temporomandibular ankylosis, infections of the submaxillary gland, and closure of antro-oral fistula.

DERMATOLOGY

PAPERS on a variety of subjects were published from the Service, including reviews in physical medicine and topics of interest to the general practitioner contributed to two British medical journals. Staff members participated in the teaching activities of the American Academy of Dermatology, the State Society and the American Academy of Compensation Medicine.

Research was conducted especially with the aim of training the resident in various techniques, a major investigative effort dealt with sensitivity to penicillin. The Dermatologist to the Hospital was appointed editor of The Journal of Compensation Medicine and was re-elected secretary of the American Academy of Compensation Medicine.

MEDICINE

THE past year was the first in the Hospital's history in which the Department of Medicine operated as a consolidated administrative unit under a single full-time departmental executive officer. The Hospital thus took an important step in line with its policy of establishing unified departments under full-time direction in all the larger clinical as well as laboratory services. The reorganized Department is among the largest and most complex in the country in the voluntary hospital field. It is responsible for the management of four medical wards comprising 148 beds, more than 20 clinics with a large out-patient population, medical care at the House Staff level for the large Private and Semi-Private Pavilions, and the professional staff of the Consultation Service. The Department is also responsible for the teaching of 30 interns during their four-month stay on the medical wards, the training in internal medicine of 16 assistant residents, four residents and a large group of Fellows, and the professional development of the 240 physicians who comprise its in-patient and O.P.D. attending staff. Other functions embrace teaching in the School of Nursing and other auxiliary services, and in our large post-graduate program. Finally, Department members are engaged in a large and diverse research program requiring coordination and supervision.

As part of a general reorganization designed to delegate more authority to staff members, a major reorganization of the medical ward service was effected. Three Attending Physicians were appointed, two of whom will serve eight months on two wards (male and female), four months on service and four off; and the third, in annual rotation, to supervise the medical O.P.D.

Eight Associate Attending Physicians were assigned to direct the four medical wards, each on service six months a year. Teamed with the Associate Attending Physicians were 12 Assistant Attendings, each on service four months. The teams are constituted so as to bring together physicians of diverse interests and skills. The aim of the plan is to maintain centralized responsibility for medical care on the wards through the over-all supervision of the Director of Medicine, while providing patients with the most expert and diverse medical skills and affording the professional staff the maximum responsibility necessary for their development.

Revision of the medical clinics was also initiated. The Arthritis Clinic's personnel was expanded and a laboratory provided for specialized routine and research. The Allergy Clinic's personnel was increased and a more integrated program instituted. A Myasthenia Gravis Clinic was started and soon became an outstanding center in its field. Sustained care of rheumatic fever patients was added to the activities of the Cardiac Clinics. The Gastrointestinal Clinic was expanded to embrace the new residency training program. A number of Department members participated in the activities of obstetric and gynecologic clinics. Two O.P.D. Senior Clinical Assistants were appointed Assistant Attending Physicians on the in-patient staff. Greater in-patient staff participation in the medical O.P.D. was begun with the assignment of an Attending Physician. Medical Staff conferences were held twice a month and the Director of Medicine met three mornings a week with the Medical Resident Staff to integrate administrative procedure and patient management on the medical wards.

THE medical wards cared for 1,740 patients, exclusive of semi-private inclusive rate admissions, an increase of 176 or 11 per cent over 1952. The gain was due largely to the success of the Administration and Nursing Service in keeping full ward facilities open through the summer months. Medical ward patient-days totaled 47,402, as against 41,846 in 1952, with an average stay per patient of 27.2 days. The mean occupancy rate was 90 percent, a figure reflecting the Hospital's great service to the indigent sick.

Considerable emphasis was placed on the emotional and social aspects of treating the patient. The Attending and House Staffs were oriented in that direction by psychiatric consultants assigned to the wards. Social Service representatives were available to patients and their families at all times. The recreation program, under the direction of a full-time recreation director, was extended.

A significant advance was the establishment of uniform ward regulations for medications, precautions, organization of charts, composition of diets, procedure for tests, etc. The standardization was effected in collaboration with the School of Nursing and the ancillary services, and should bring about further economies and simplify ward administration.

House Staff instruction emphasized bedside medicine in diagnosis and management. There was also instruction in clinical pathology, discussion of mechanisms of disease with members of the Attending Staff and various research teams, and coordinated teaching programs by the Departments of Electrocardiography, Psychiatry and Roentgenology. The House Staff participated in daily ward rounds and weekly grand rounds, clinical-pathological conferences and other teaching exercises. Weekly ward rounds with the Director of Medicine were instituted, as were weekly presentations of medical topics chosen by House Staff members, to encourage initiative and use of reference sources. The Department received more than 140 assistant residency applications and almost 50 for fellowships.

Interns divide four months between the medical male and female wards, on a rotation assuring maximal teaching contacts. Assistant residents similarly divide six months, then have three months in the Private and Semi-private Pavilions, and three in a specialty of choice. Medical residents work in teams of two, interchanging responsibilities on a male and female ward through the year. Fellows either spend a full year in a specialty of choice or rotate through four specialties, three months in each.

Several improvements were made in the Department's residency training program. A case report or equivalent study was required before completion of the year, a prerequisite intended to give experience in the organization of independent investigation. Bi-weekly case discussions and teaching sessions were instituted for assistant residents during their quarter in the Private and Semi-private Pavilions. A fifth resident was added from the fellow staff on a three-month rotation when additional floors were opened in the Klingenstein Pavilion. A two-year residency in gastroenterology was inaugurated, for which A.M.A. approval is expected. A more comprehensive three-year residency in internal medicine was planned to include the present third-year Fellowship in Medicine.

Most of our research fellowships in medicine were awarded to residents completing their training here. Most of them do part-time research while beginning medical practice, and are given an opportunity to participate in ward rounds.

Undergraduate teaching in the Department was limited to a two-month course given in the summer. There were representatives from eight medical schools, mainly students beginning their fourth year. Our postgraduate program was being reorganized to adhere more closely to current needs. In addition to specialty training courses, the Department offers a biennial one-week symposium in cardiovascular disease sponsored by the American College of Physicians. It is hoped to supplement this with a course in internal medicine to be held in the intervening years.

It is possible here only to indicate in broadest terms the scope of research by members of the Department of Medicine.

The controversial role of bone, connective tissue and muscle in maintaining the composition of extracellular fluid was investigated in detail, together with the effects of desoxycorticosterone, adrenal insufficiency and venous obstruction on the distribution of fluid and electrolytes. The electrolyte content of saliva was studied. The use of a carbonic anhydrase inhibitor, Diamox, as an oral diuretic was introduced and its renal effects in alkalosis and acidosis determined. The effects of pitressin on discrete renal functions were investigated. An exhaustive study was made of the deficiencies in renal tubular function in a case of Fanconi syndrome. The uricosuric action of salicylates and of phenylbutazone was analyzed in respect to renal tubular and glomerular function. The virtually complete filtrability of the plasma urate was demonstrated. Mechanisms regulating the rate of urine flow in nephritis were analyzed.

Important contributions to the management of myasthenia gravis were made with the introduction of Tensilon to distinguish myasthenic from cholinergic crises, and in critical evaluations of octamethyl pyrophosphoramide and pyridostigmine bromide—the latter a useful new drug in treatment. The usefulness of intravenous fructose in the control of certain diabetic emergencies was successfully explored. Long-range studies in the treatment of sarcoidosis were continued and the diagnostic value of the Nickerson-Kveim test in this disease was further established. The clinical and roentgenographic manifestations of broncholithiasis were more sharply defined in a series of cases of unprecedented number. Long-range studies in the management of disseminated lupus erythematosus, Addison's disease and Cushing's disease were continued.

A new Rh antibody, anti-f, was discovered and the present status of hemolytic diseases of the newborn and of transfusion reactions was reviewed. A blood coagulation laboratory for the study of hemophilia and related disorders was established; one of the first accomplishments was the elucidation of modes of inheritance and improved methods of treatment in plasma thromboplastin component deficiency. A unified concept of myeloproliferative disorders was formulated. The treatment of idiopathic purpuras with corticotrophin was assessed. New light was shed on the mechanisms responsible for the diagnostically important lupus cell phenomenon, particularly in relation to blood coagulation.

The sprue syndrome was defined in more general than customary terms as an inborn error of metabolism and the roentgenographic criteria for diagnosis more sharply defined. An important new drug in the management of sprue, hydrocortisone in the form of the free alcohol, was evaluated. The effects of heparin on the blood lipids was extensively studied. A pioneer investigation on the fate of isotope-labeled cholesterol in normal and hypercholesteremic subjects was completed. N<sup>15</sup>-labeled glycine was employed to study the mechanisms of biosynthesis of uric acid in normal and gouty subjects, and the relation of dietary protein intake to utilization of glycine for uric acid synthesis.

A new concept of the nature of gout, based on clinical and isotope studies, was proposed to include primary and secondary forms of the disease, each with its own predominant metabolic aberration. The modern principles of management in gout were summarized; one of the recent advances, accomplished largely in this Department, was the development of practical methods for the prevention and treatment of chronic gouty arthritis. The first isotope study of the biosynthesis of hemoglobin and of uric acid in a case of secondary polycythemia was reported.

A review of benign paroxysmal peritonitis, first described from this hospital, was prepared. A well-authenticated case of bacitracin nephropathy was recorded. The selection of antibiotics in the treatment of refractory bacterial infections was reviewed. Long-range studies of subacute bacterial endocarditis were continued. An analysis of the therapeutic efficacy of various dosage schedules for the use of fuadin in the treatment of schistosomiasis was made. Improved culture methods for the detection of amebae were developed. A case of filariasis due to Loa Loa was described.

A new adiabatic recording digital calorimeter was devised. The effects of the rice diet and of antihypertensive drugs on peripheral vascular resistance in essential hypertension were measured by digital calorimetry. A report was made of the current status of drug therapy of hypertension. The early development of peripheral small artery disease in diabetes was demonstrated by microplethysmography and digital calorimetry. A study was made of sympathetic reflex dystrophies in coronary heart disease, with degenerative changes in the small joints of the upper extremities. The effects of intra-arterial priscoline on joint and muscle temperatures were determined.

A study and evaluation of C-reactive protein was made, with special reference to rheumatic fever and the post-commissurotomy syndrome. The atrial complexes in congenital and acquired valvular disease were analyzed vectorcardiographically. New methods were devised for calibration and testing of ballistocardiographs, with the hope of using this technique for estimation of the cardiac output. An even higher incidence of vascular disease in diabetes than is now realized was indicated by ballistocardiographic studies. The operations of the cardiovascular research unit were intensified and extended to include systematic appraisal of rheumatic as well as congenital heart lesions. The hemodynamics of cardiac and pulmonary function in women in various stages of pregnancy were studied in detail, in conjunction with the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

A simple method for estimating serum alpha-2 plus beta globulins was devised by turbidimetric measurement of acid-precipitable globulin. The diagnostic significance of the serum mucoproteins in liver disease, neoplasia and other disorders was assessed. The control of water metabolism in hepatic cirrhosis was studied. The present status of tests of pancreatic function was reviewed and an outstanding monograph on diseases of the pancreas was prepared. An experimental study on the efficacy of subtotal gastrectomy in reducing pancreatic secretion was carried out to supplement clinical studies in patients with recurring pancreatitis treated this way. Recent advances in gastroenterological clinical experience and research were reviewed.

In conjunction with the Department of Psychiatry, a study was made of the psychodynamics of asthma. The physiological and psychological effects of lysergic acid were extensively studied. The properties of ragweed extracts purified by chromatographic and electrophoretic methods were described. The characteristics of ground substance in experimental scurvy, exophthalmos and other conditions were examined. A long-term study of the effects of thyroid-stimulating hormone on adrenal cortical function was continued. The influence of various endocrine glands on the distribution of body water was investigated. Relationships between "central" diabetes insipidus and "end-organ" diabetes insipidus in renal disease were pointed out. The role of testicular dysgenesis as a factor in cryptorchidism was carefully worked out and the histopathology of cryptorchidism clarified particularly in relation to pseudo-cancer morphology. A study was made of hypercholesterolemia in rabbits and dogs, induced by administration of corticosteroids and of interest in connection with the pathogenesis of atherosclerosis. Evidence was presented for a discrete form of leukemia designated reticulum cell leukemia.

NEUROLOGY

THE Department continued to investigate the effect of various drugs on the nervous and muscular system. The treatment of epilepsy with the new drug "Mysoline" proved gratifying and a report of the findings were published in The Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry. The "amytal test" for brain disease was further developed and 600 patients have been tested. The project concerned the investigation of behavior in patients with alterations in brain function. The relation of pattern and element in patients with delusions, hallucinations and mood changes were studied by psychological and physiological methods. We also collaborated with the Departments of Psychiatry and Medicine in studies of lysergic acid.

We extended our researches in perceptual responses to double simultaneous stimulation in collaboration with investigators in other institutions. Tests were conducted on normal adults and patients with psychogenic disorders as well as organic psychoses. We also studied large groups of patients with cerebral lesion by means of special tests in perception and in intellectual function. Much of this was done by our experimental psychologists.

One of our largest investigations was on vision and eye movements as related to nervous system function. This research was supported by the National Institute of Neurologic Diseases and Blindness of the U. S. Public Health Service. The time devoted to research and development of apparatus paid off in valuable data accumulated. This study, conducted by three teams of workers, promises to be very fruitful to the clinician as well as to the physiologist. Our work is attracting national interest and the laboratory has become known as one of the largest neuro-ophthalmology centers. Investigators from across the nation and foreign countries visited the Department.

The Electroencephalography Laboratory continues to be active in research and in teaching. Work was begun on refinement of E.E.C. diagnostic techniques. Among the many other investigations, data are being collected on so-called normal old people. The emphasis has been not only on diagnosis, but also on standards as to what is normal or what is physiologic.

The teaching program included, besides the usual conferences, orientation lectures in neurology by members of the attending staff to the residents. Many distinguished guest speakers contributed to our program including Dr. Macdonald Critchley, Dean, Institute of Neurology, The National Hospital, London.

The teaching program and care of hemiplegic and paraplegic cases both benefited from our liaison with the Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation of New York University in the training of neurologic residents.

The clinical service had an increased census, with many patients coming from outside the city. It was generally a year of expanded activity in research, teaching and in the study and treatment of patients.

NEUROSURGERY

THE year marked the firm establishment of the service under its present administration. The routine included ward rounds, conferences and staff meetings. Daily ward rounds took place at irregular hours. Weekly grand rounds, including all members of the staff and usually some visitors, were held regularly on Friday afternoons from 12:30 to 1:30 on wards O and P, followed by a neuroradiological conference given in conjunction with the Radiology Department. On the fourth Monday each month, an evening neuropathological conference took place, at which all the surgical specimens were demonstrated on the micro-projector and a brief summary of each operative case given. This was followed by a program including a statistical report of operations, complications and fatalities during the month; a brief summary of the work of the month by the Electroencephalography Department and by the radioisotope department; a presentation of a current, interesting clinical case; and, finally a paper presented by a staff member.

Surgery took place, with relatively few exceptions, every morning and afternoon but Friday afternoon and the weekends. The schedule is so integrated that ward, private and semi-private patients, who use the same room, are dealt with according to priority of admission, unless priority of clinical indication takes precedence. During the year, there were 339 neurosurgical procedures, most of them major operations; 220 were private or semi-private cases, and 119 ward. Of the ward patients, 106 operations, both major and minor, were done by the resident staff, mostly the senior resident, always carefully supervised by a member of the attending staff.

Research was chiefly of a clinical character, except for a radioisotope investigation. The Neurosurgeon to the Hospital and the staff published 14 papers on a wide range of subjects in the field.

OBSTETRICS AND GYNECOLOGY

OBSTETRICS

THE obstetrical division is proud to report on its first full year's operation. From Jan. 1 through Dec. 31, 2,741 mothers delivered 2,775 babies. The proportion of private to ward patients was approximately two to one.

In January, 137 women were delivered; by December, the number had grown to 324. No mothers died during pregnancy, labor or the period thereafter, an extraordinary result that may be attributed to good fortune, modern developments in the science of obstetrics, and the conscientious care on the part of the senior obstetricians, resident staff, nursing personnel and the three full-time anesthetists, and the unequalled quality of service rendered by the consulting physicians.

Forty-three fetuses weighing over 400 grams were born dead (fetal deaths) and 31 infants who were born alive died immediately or at some time within the first month of life (neonatal deaths). This yields a total fetal loss of 26.7 per 1000 births, and when tiny infants weighing between 400 and 1000 grams (14 oz. and 2 lbs. 3 oz.) are eliminated, the rate is reduced to 20.2 per 1000 births. This figure is less than half the rate reported for the whole country.

The fourth-year class of medical students from Columbia began labor floor duty at Mount Sinai on October 1 as an integral part of their regular curriculum. Small groups of students were assigned daily from 5:30 P.M. to 8 A.M. Each evening a senior member of our obstetrical staff met the students for bedside instruction. We are receiving enthusiastic reports from Dr. Howard Taylor, Jr., head of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Columbia, about the students' reaction to their training here.

The obstetrical division is grateful to several other services for their enthusiastic cooperation in the conduct of special clinics, most notably to the physicians in the obstetrical diabetic clinic, the cardiac clinic, the chest clinic, the toxemia clinic, the varicose vein clinic and the psychosomatic clinic. The quality of research interest and eagerness to teach displayed by these physicians furnished the best possible example of how a great departmentalized hospital can and should function in joint endeavors. Each of the clinics collected valuable material for future publications. Early in 1954 a hematological clinic and an obstetrical-gynecological endocrine clinic will be initiated.

Other interesting research projects have been initiated, among them the hemodynamics of normal and abnormal pregnancy by cardiac catheterization, the diagnosis and treatment of vaginitis, and the effectiveness of contraceptive techniques correlated to the intelligence, emotional stability and socio-economic status of the patient.

The Department has from its inception transferred all delivery records to code sheets and then to 80-column punch cards. This enables it to issue accurate quarterly and annual reports. After several years it will have valuable material for clinical investigations. The Department is also employing code sheets and punch cards for several of its research projects.

Several publications have already appeared from the obstetrical division, among them studies on the incidence of multiple births, the delivery of the premature infant, afibrinogenemia in labor, the early history of the treatment of sterility, etc. Members of the Department have appeared on the programs of the leading obstetrical-gynecological societies and also have taken part in post-graduate teaching seminars in other parts of the country.

GYNECOLOGY

THE Gynecology Services had 587 admissions on the ward service and 466 operations. These were largely done by the resident staff under the supervision of attendants. There were 210 laparotomies and 264 vaginal procedures, some patients requiring both. Approximately 30 per cent were minor operations and 70 per cent major.

The Department launched a new program of radical cancer surgery in cases refractory to radio therapy. There were 17 papers published in scientific journals on gynecologic topics and 15 more were being prepared for publication.

OPHTHALMOLOGY

THE further integration of O.P.D. activities with the In-patient Eye Service necessitated a considerable increase in the staff.

Members of the Service published 17 papers and contributed sections to two ophthalmic texts, one of international scope. One member gave an exhibit at the A.M.A. and a paper at both the A.M.A. and the Pan-American Medical Conventions; another read a paper before the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology. We have three members on the Academy's faculty, who also teach at New York University. The public health campaign that recently culminated in a Federal regulation requiring sterility of commercial ophthalmic solutions was initiated and carried through by members of our staff.

The Service was represented on the program committee of the Ophthalmology Section of the A.M.A., the public health committee of the Academy of Medicine, the N. Y. Society for Clinical Ophthalmology, and various committees of the New York County Medical Society. Members served as examiners for the American Board of Ophthalmology. Others lectured in the New York area and elsewhere.

Research continued in the evaluation of hypertension, ocular infections and allergies, antiseptics in surgery, cortisone in the prevention of post-operative adhesions, trypsin in ocular hemorrhages, and low-tension glaucoma in old age and in neurophthalmic problems.

ORTHOPEDICS

THE Orthopedic Service's activities continued to increase, especially in relation to the Children's Orthopedic Clinic, which remains unique in this city. A close liaison has been established with the Board of Health and several of the large social agencies handling orthopedically handicapped children.

Laboratory research was conducted on osteogenesis, the pathology of the vertebrae and scoliosis, and there was clinical investigation of new approaches in the treatment of fracture of the hip and other hip disabilities.

There was pending a reorganization of the Service with a view to providing greater continuity of application to the problems of special interest.

OTOLARYNGOLOGY

AMONG the Service's achievements was the development of operative technics for the treatment of rhinoplastic, otologic and laryngeal conditions. An ingenious procedure in tracheal surgery was successfully carried out at the laboratory stage. Two presentations were made at the International Congress of Otolaryngology and several publications appeared in the journals of the specialty. A staff member devoted several weeks in Israel to special otologic operations, setting up audiology clinics and giving clinical instruction to specialists.

PEDIATRICS

THE Department of Pediatrics began operation of two new units—the premature center and the poliomyelitis respirator center. These units, which received a major share of the attention of the Department, added greatly to the effectiveness of the service as a teaching center and enhanced its value to the community.

The premature center was planned and equipped with the utmost care. With a capacity of 44, it is the largest premature unit in a voluntary hospital in New York. The center cares for infants from hospitals all over New York as well as those born at Mount Sinai. In its first year, the premature center achieved an enviable record. Its staff of pediatricians and nurses was responsible for the survival of a number of extremely small infants.

The respirator center was established in October as an integral part of the Department. The Hospital has the distinction of having one of only nine such centers in the United States and the first in the city. The main purpose of the center is to provide special care by personnel equipped with the special knowledge and skills necessary to obtain the best results in the care of patients who have breathing difficulties caused by poliomyelitis. To help give such service, liaison physicians were provided by the Departments of Psychiatry, Orthopedics, and Physical Medicine. The center supplemented the teaching facilities for residents, interns, medical students and nurses. The necessary laboratory requirements for the evaluation of patients in the center were met by the procurement of additional equipment for the Pediatrics Laboratory. These new facilities, together with the apparatus already available, provide much needed tools for research into the problems of patients crippled by poliomyelitis.

Toward the year's end, the obstetrical pavilion approached its maximum productivity, imposing upon our Department the duty and pleasure of caring for 2,780 newborns. The cooperation and helpfulness of the Department of Obstetrics is greatly appreciated by the Pediatric staff. During the year, 13 infants were born alive to diabetic mothers. It is gratifying that all 13 survived, despite the ordinarily extremely high mortality rate among such infants.

The Pediatric wards and Pediatric Out-Patient Department had a very busy year. The Department cared for 2,147 patients in the Hospital, and there were 23,659 visits to the Out-Patient Department.

In the Department's Rosenstiel Laboratories research on the study of body water and salts was continued. Important contributions were made concerning the treatment of the dehydration resulting from diarrhea in infancy. Other studies provided a clearer understanding of the effects of hormones such as ACTH and cortisone upon the minerals and water of the body. Experiments were begun on the abnormalities of salt and water metabolism in patients with nephrosis.

AN INPATIENT OUTDOORS ON THE PEDIATRIC SUNROOF

Investigations were undertaken which did much to clarify the complex manner by which the body compensates for sudden or protracted losses of salt and water. The constant attention given in our laboratories to the metabolism of salt and water reflects their importance in the body function of infants and children.

Research on viruses and other microbiological agents was carried out with great intensity. The newest methods were used for growing viruses in tissue culture and various phases of the metabolism of viruses were studied. Studies of the movement of viruses on filter paper, begun several years ago, were continued and furnished new information regarding the nature of viruses, while providing a new method for the detection of the interaction of antiserum and viruses.

PHYSICAL MEDICINE

A FULL-TIME associate attending physiatrist, Dr. Lawrence H. Wisham, was appointed to help the Department cope with its expanding activities and to provide closer medical supervision of treatment. There was increasing emphasis on rehabilitation techniques and much therapist time was devoted to the treatment of hemiplegia caused by cerebrovascular accidents and brain surgery. We were engaged in the process of devising and evaluating newer rehabilitation techniques designed to restore greater function in paralyses.

The Department continued to make original contributions to its field, as illustrated by an exhibit on exercise devices shown at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association and a paper read at the American Congress of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation on the use of ultrasound in the treatment of scars.

The results of our investigation into the range of motion of the human foot and a description of a new device for testing and exercising the muscles of the foot were published in the June issue of Archives of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation. We continued investigation into the uses of ultrasound therapy, with particular reference to the treatment of Dupuyteen's contractures. Investigations of the effect of ethyl chloride on temperatures of skin, subcutaneous tissue and muscle, and of the changes in arthritic temperatures following intraarterial injection of priscoline were concluded and will be published.

The opening of the Respirator Center as part of the Department of Pediatrics increased the Department's work in the treatment of poliomyelitis.

PSYCHIATRY

THE reorganization of the Department of Psychiatry into nine divisions facilitated all aspects of the department's function, particularly with regard to service to patients. The Ward Division in the latter part of the year had the highest continuous census since its inception, with about 19 patients. There was a fairly large waiting list, which emphasized the lack of space making difficult the full function of the department.

The appointment of two Attending Psychiatrists, increased integration of the liaison work. All the liaison activity in the Hospital and the outpatient department, with the exception of child psychiatry, was placed under the direction of one of the Attending Psychiatrists who in addition was charged with the integration and carrying out of the training programs. This arrangement improved the liaison work in many ways and promises to be particularly fruitful in the education of the entire house staff, as well as psychiatric residents.

The Committee on Medical Education approved a program for the teaching of interns and residents on all services during their training in the hospital. Meetings with liaison psychiatrists on a weekly or bi-weekly basis will eventually round out the training of the house staff in relation to their own fields. There were approximately 750 formal consultations from the various inpatient services.

The Adult Outpatient Division, as usual, conducted an intensive diagnostic and treatment program. There were approximately 6,000 patient visits during the year. The special follow-up and therapy clinic continued its activity both for service and the training of residents working with patients after discharge from the Ward Service.

In the Child Psychiatry Division, under the other Attending Psychiatrist, there were again special problems created by the lack of trained and qualified people in the field. The training program for the utilization of fellows is being expanded, and it is hoped that funds will become available for the simultaneous training of four fellows in child psychiatry. The shortage of personnel reflects itself in the relatively few patients treated intensively in this division. The following clinics were functioning at the year's end: Parent-Child Guidance, Adolescent, Ward Liaison Psychosomatic, O.P.D. Liaison Psychosomatic, and Group Psychotherapy. Liaison activity and training in child psychiatry continued.

The Psychology Division, continued with increased activity both on a service and training basis. Of the 24 psychologists, eight were on a trainee or extern-basis for the completion of their training as clinical psychologists. This division has been particularly active in all aspects of the service function of the Hospital and engaged in numerous collaboratives and independent research projects.

The Social Service Division continued to be an active part of the Department. The New York School of Social Work maintained its training unit of eight students.

The Mount Sinai Hospital-Federation Project, under the direction of a staff member, completed an excellent follow-up study of patients discharged from Bellevue Hospital. The final report should be of great value to Federation.

A number of clinical research problems were in progress during the year. Several contributions seem to be of outstanding importance. In addition to intra-departmental research, a number of studies were conducted in collaboration with other services.

The practice of inviting an Honorary Visiting Psychiatrist was continued and Dr. Howard Rome, chief of the psychiatric section of the Mayo Clinic, obliged us with a most stimulating week.

It should be emphasized again that the physical facilities of the Department are such that its function is restricted in many ways, and it is hoped that the expanded program envisioned will begin in the near future.

RADIOLOGY

THE Department's construction program was virtually completed. Main X-ray operated eight diagnostic rooms for more than half the year. The third diagnostic room in O.P.D. X-ray, the X-ray room on the delivery floor and the infant fluoroscope in the Premature Ward were completed and were functioning as intended. X-ray equipment was installed in the Cardiovascular Research Laboratory and ordered for the Atran Laboratory. A manual cassette changer to permit serial filming during lumbar aortography and angiocardiology in the horizontal position was also ordered for early delivery. A pressure device to permit intravascular or intracardiac injection of radio-opaque material via a catheter was obtained and tests were begun on animals. It is hoped with this device to work out a safe method for selective opacification of individual cardiac chambers and large vessels.

The most rewarding technical advance in the Department's routine activities was the development of satisfactory phototiming for spot radiography. This has reached a point where excellent quality radiographs can be obtained in the course of esophageal, gastric, colonic and chest fluoroscopy. A second important technical advance was the investigation of the usefulness of the new 0.3 mm. focus X-ray tube for fluoroscopic spot radiography and magnification radiography. This tube improved fluoroscopic visibility of details, especially in chest and stomach fluoroscopy, to a distinctly useful degree. It also made possible spot radiography of infants in all types of examinations and of adults in chest examination of an unprecedented quality.

Photographic equipment was obtained to make possible immediate copying of radiographs on Poloroid film at low cost. The prints are kept in a cross-index teaching file. This method is useful in copying outside films for instruction purposes.

The personnel monitoring program was continued. Recording of radiation exposures was continued. The quality control program for the darkrooms was conducted routinely and will be extended to radiographic and fluoroscopic equipment to complement a new type of prophylactic service.

Exhibits were prepared for the two national radiological society meetings on sprue and cerebral angiography, the latter detailing also a new method of localization of the deep veins of the brain, incorporated in a template. A paper incorporating the Mount Sinai method of pelvimetry and another on short esophagus with esophago-gastric ulceration were accepted for publication. Investigative work on hiatus hernias, cerebral angiography, problems in pediatric roentgenology, benign colonic lesions and angiocardiology was planned for 1954.

A course in differential diagnosis of chest lesions was given in affiliation with Columbia and had considerable demand. The daily departmental conference with presentation of surgical and necropsy material was continued, as were the combined conferences with the Medical, Surgical, Pediatric, Obstetric and Gynecological, Neurological and Neurosurgical and Orthopedic Services, participation in Surgery C grand rounds, the congenital cardiac conferences and other educational activities.

The expected increase in the work-load of the Department was greater than anticipated. Patient visits increased from 35,500 in 1952 to 40,451, and the number of films from 134,300 to 154,400.

RADIOTHERAPY

THE Radiotherapy Department mourned the loss of Dr. William Harris, its chief for over 20 years. Dr. Harris was a pioneer in the field and it was through his leadership that the Department achieved its status as a radiotherapeutic center. It is the fervent hope of the Department to maintain his standards of scholarship, skill, and humanity.

The Mount Sinai Colpostat, designed and perfected in our Department, was exhibited at the annual meeting of one of the national radiological societies. Its importance and usefulness has been established for the treatment of cancer of the cervix uteri and other forms of pelvic cancer.

A precision photographic method was devised for measuring the intensity of gamma radiation from any system of radium therapy. This enables us to determine, with a high degree of accuracy, the exact field of activity of any arrangement of radium sources. The method was originally devised for detailed study of the radium treatment of cancer of the cervix uteri. Its usefulness is being extended to other fields of radium therapy.

A new automatic rotating chair in the room with the 400 KV therapy machine makes possible the application of rotation therapy to deeply situated tumors, particularly of the brain and esophagus. A method was also devised for accurate localization of the radiation beam within the body during the actual rotation of the patient.

A comprehensive course in radium therapy, given in affiliation with Columbia, was arranged to follow and supplement a course in Radiation Physics at the university taken by most students of radiology in New York. The course was well received and will be repeated. It covered all phases of the clinical applications of radium and appeared to fill an important need.

Extensive experience was acquired with the use of radioactive gold and radioactive strontium. The radio-gold was employed mainly in the treatment of fluid accumulations in the abdomen and chest. A technique was worked out that greatly simplified the introduction of the radioactive solution into the body cavities. Radio-strontium was employed in the form of a superficial applicator and its usefulness was particularly noted in diseases of the eye and skin.

Further studies established grid X-ray therapy as the technique of choice for advanced inoperable cancer of the bladder, pelvic organs, lung and esophagus and also for large single tumor masses. Considerable palliation and prolongation of active useful life were achieved.

The Department's activities were integrated with the functions of the Tumor Clinic, which serves as a source of cancer material for the entire hospital and is also an important field for the study of many cancer problems. The Department's entire staff, voluntary and resident, was active in the clinic.

A main objective was to establish a higher standard of care for the neglected patient with advanced cancer, the case that is so often considered hopeless. Close cooperation of other departments was obtained. All difficult problems were studied together and an individualized plan of treatment embracing surgery, radiation therapy, hormone therapy, chemotherapy, or any combination of these forms of therapy was made for each patient.

We look forward to expansion of our technical facilities to include recently developed apparatus for the production of the more penetrating radiations. Further clinical, biological and physical research was planned for the better understanding of the role that radiation therapy plays in the treatment of malignant disease.

SURGERY

ON November 1, 1952 the full-time Director of Surgery took office and by last July a number of changes in service administration and House Staff training had been made. The reorganization affected the operating rooms, the wards and the out-patient department.

The inauguration of a straight surgical internship provided six straight surgical interns and six rotating interns at any one time on the Surgical Service, permitting coverage of private and semi-private surgical patients by interns and assistant residents. The private service, previously a separate unit, was merged with the ward service to permit House Staff rotation between the two as needed.

The several surgical services were reorganized into two divisions. Each division is administered for six-month-periods by rotating teams consisting of an Associate Attending Surgeon and three or four Assistant Attending Surgeons. Emphasis is placed on maximal delegation of authority and responsibility. A Surgeon to the Hospital is assigned to each team. Cardiac and pediatric surgery are included as sub-divisions of the ward service, with an assistant resident in charge.

Male and female patients are admitted to either division with any problem falling in the province of general surgery. Assignments are arranged so that each team always has at least one man whose special interest and training is in thoracic surgery. These men specially trained and interested in the sub-specialties—rectal surgery, head and neck surgery, peripheral vascular disease, plastic surgery—have been constantly on service, advising and directing the care of patients in their fields on both divisions.

The Surgical Out-Patient Clinic, reorganized to coincide with the disposition of patients on the wards, meets five mornings a week under the supervision of an Assistant Attending Surgeon, with one Assistant Attending in continuing charge. Follow-Up Clinics meet with or immediately after the General Surgical Clinic each day for given fields in general surgery.

By having each of the various Follow-Up Clinics meet on a given day of the week throughout the year under an Assistant Attending Surgeon, an opportunity will exist for the House Staff to develop special interests in surgery and gain experience in them. The ward arrangements are also such as to expose both the House and Visiting Staffs at once to the full spectrum of general surgery and at the same time to provide opportunities for special interest in a given field.

The same surgeons of the in-patient and out-patient staffs see the follow-up patients, as well as the regular out-patients. The Breast Clinic was integrated with the Surgical Out-Patient Clinic.

Work in the Out-Patient Clinic is important for training purposes and indispensable to the proper coordination of the in-patient and out-patient services. Each of the two residents has his morning in the Out-Patient Department, during which he continues to see for as long as is necessary, the patients upon whom he has operated and who are now being followed in the O.P.D. There the patients are seen by members of the Attending Staff, who, as a rule, knew them on the wards and will continue to serve them as the permanent staff of the given Follow-Up Clinic.

A surgical assistant resident was assigned to Reception and to the Dispensary. He is responsible for the supervision of interns in the care of surgical patients applying for emergency treatment and sees all patients considered for admission to the Surgical Service. Decisions on admission are made by the surgical assistant residents and the residents. The two rotating interns previously assigned to reception each month have been reinforced by one surgical intern so that there has been more adequate professional coverage in this busy area.

A number of alterations were made in operating rooms administration and practice. The use of sterile packs for linen supplies was adopted, replacing metal drums and making it possible to have an individual sterile table for each operation. Thicker, larger towels and drapes were put in use to provide greater safety. The Hospital Laundry prepared and wrapped the large volume of linen, in aid of the heavily burdened central supply room and operating rooms.

The basis for assignment of operating rooms was changed from pavilion of patients' origin to field of surgery involved. Admirable progress was made in coordinating the two floors of operating rooms into a unit. The enlargement of the Nursing Staff in the fall made possible the opening of additional operating rooms and by December all twelve in Semi-Private and two of the reconstructed ones in Private were in full use. The shortened work day ending at 4:30 P.M. adopted in the spring was continued. At substantial expense, many worn or out-moded instruments were replaced and a supply was provided more in keeping with the volume of work. The acquisition of four new operating tables and the installation of modern overhead lights were the first steps in a program of equipment replacement. In February, a comprehensive plan for the remodeling of the eighth, ninth and tenth floors was presented to the Building Committee of the Board of Trustees. The most pressing needs in the operating rooms are for modern autoclaves, a new air-conditioning system and physical alterations such as construction of an instrument room, more work space for nurses, pathologists, anesthesiologists, better locker rooms for all personnel, and for the Department of Surgery, office space, a library and a conference room.

The first reconstructed nursing station in the Surgical Pavilion was put to use on Ward T in July. It has been an unqualified success in facilitating the work of nurses and staff in the care and observation of patients and has significantly improved the appearance of the 50-year-old wards, which were modernized 20 years ago. It is to be hoped that the stations on the other wards will be similarly constructed as part of the long due modernization of a fundamentally sound and cheerful building.

The Post-Operative Recovery Suite was opened in September on the seventh floor of Private and proved a tremendous asset. Cardiac patients, ward or private, were cared for in a special cardiac recovery unit in a room in the Pediatric Pavilion. Although the space is small, the professional assistance was superb and the safety of patients greatly enhanced. More adequate facilities are being planned. The Building Committee is considering the urgent need for an additional recovery room. Daily instruction of the House Staff on the wards and in the operating rooms continued as before. The Wednesday afternoon Surgical X-ray Conference became, with the collaboration of the Department of Radiology, the combined Surgical and X-ray Staff Conference. It is held in the fifth floor Clinical Amphitheatre, which was repainted and provided with modern x-ray view boxes and a tilted blackboard. One morning a week, the four Surgeons to the Hospital in rotation, have the responsibility of a one-hour presentation directed to the requirements of the House Staff. A combined Cardiac Conference of radiologists, pediatricians, cardiologists and surgeons met weekly. With the operating rooms closed Saturdays, the entire morning was devoted to teaching. At each session, one or two cases were presented in great detail as starting points for discussions of special conditions. The sessions were followed by a ward walk through the Surgical Pavilion, with group discussions at the bedside. The House Staff conducted its own conference weekday evenings, led by the two residents or by a junior member of the Departments of Pathology, Radiology and Psychiatry.

Department members continued the investigation of many problems, handicapped by lack of facilities but looking forward to the opening of the Atran Laboratories. More than 50 publications and 75 lectures emanated from the Department as well as several exhibits at scientific meetings.

UROLOGY

THE Service continued to study improved techniques of prostatectomy. Particularly gratifying were several methods of one-stage suprapubic prostatectomy with primary bladder closure. Hemostasis was secured by using a new starch prostatic cone or transurethral fulguration.

A study of prococious puberty and a case of fibroepithelial polyp of the ureter were described and published. Articles prepared for publication concerned metanephrogenic cyst, nephrocalcinosis in renal tubular acidosis, surgical management of bilateral ureteral injury, renal artery aneurysm, acute renal suppression following ureteral catheterization, and uretero-ureterostomy.

Improvements were made on the foam rubber X-ray table mat. Studies continued on the statistics of renal neoplasm and carcinoma of the bladder.

A member of the Service discussed the urologic complications of regional ileitis at the Buffalo meeting of the State Medical Society, and another made a presentation on retropubic prostatectomy.

Research continued with the "artificial kidney." A new disposable unit was devised and experimentally proved. We are awaiting an opportunity for its clinical application and evaluation.

THE OUT-PATIENT DEPARTMENT

THE Out-Patient Department completed its eightieth year of service to the community with all its efforts devoted to the primary purpose of treating the ambulant sick who are unable to afford private medical care.

The declining patient census noted over the past years and referred to in previous reports was reversed in 1953. Consultations numbered 201,024 compared with 186,415 in 1952, an increase of 7.8 per cent. Obstetrical clinic visits totaled 10,302, thus accounting for 70 per cent of the increase. This was the first full year of operation of the prenatal and related specialty clinics.

The number of new patients admitted for treatment was 9,480, an increase of 24 per cent over the previous year. The obstetrical clinics again account for a large portion of this gain, about half the total.

The cost per patient visit, as determined by the United Hospital Fund formula, reached a high of approximately $5.50 while our average income per patient remained unchanged at about $1.00 a visit. It should be noted, however, that 63 per cent of all visits to our clinics are free. No patient residing in our district is ever turned away for lack of financial ability to pay. Many others outside our district are also included in this large percentage of free patients.

Most patients treated in our clinics require drugs. Some of the newer ones, more effective in the treatment and control of various diseases, are costly. Again, no patient is denied the most efficacious drug, quite apart from his ability to pay. Of the 175,000 prescriptions filled during the year, the greater part were dispensed without charge.

It can thus be seen that a large part of the huge deficit the Hospital incurred is traceable to the cost of operating our O.P.D. Our continued appeals to the City for help in this connection go unanswered.

A sustained drop in both patient and physician attendance in many of the Saturday morning clinics occasioned a study to determine whether a curtailment of these sessions would deny the community of needed service. The survey revealed that practically all major hospitals had discontinued Saturday clinics in the past few years without adversely affecting the public. We have therefore recently discontinued all Saturday morning clinics with the exception of those in Psychiatry and Medicine where an evident need was found to exist.

In my last year's report, I referred to a comprehensive study which was being undertaken to evaluate the work in the O.P.D. As a result, several changes were made which we believe were of a most constructive nature. Undoubtedly, the most noteworthy was the assignment of one of the three Attending Physicians to the Hospital to the O.P.D. Each of these men will spend a year on a rotating basis supervising the work of the various medical clinics and attempting to develop a greater integration with the In-Patient Service. Additional recommendations are being studied, all aimed at equalizing, as far as possible, the quality of In-Patient and Out-Patient care.

The Surgical Clinics were reorganized on July 1 in connection with the revision of the Surgical Service in the Hospital. To provide continuity of care for the discharged surgical ward patient, as well as to provide a more complete educational opportunity, the senior residents were assigned to clinic sessions where they may continue the post-operative care of the patient and follow his progress. In addition, an assistant resident is in attendance at all sessions to help care for patients. The long-term follow-up sessions formerly held independently by each surgical service were incorporated in our clinics, providing increased research and teaching possibilities. An assistant attending physician was assigned to direct the activities of each of the surgical clinics. The reorganization seems to have increased the interest of the clinic doctors, with a resultant improvement in attendance, as well as in the general work carried on in the clinics.

A WEEKLY clinic session for hemophiliacs was established in the Hematology Service to promote the study and more adequate care of those suffering from this hereditary blood disorder.

With the growth of the Obstetrical Service, a need arose for the follow-up care of infants born prematurely. The Premature Clinic was thus established in the Pediatric Department to meet this need and to study the developmental problems frequently associated with cases of this type.

An understanding of the importance of the psychic factor in post-operative ileostomy and colostomy patients occasioned the formation of a Group Psychotherapy Clinic for intestinal rehabilitation patients.

The Congenital Cardiac Clinic and Rheumatic Heart Disease Clinic were merged to form a Pediatric Cardiac Clinic for the study and care of congenital and acquired heart lesions. The number of patients applying to this clinic for diagnostic evaluation continually increased.

A laboratory was provided for the Arthritis Clinic to aid the active research in which the clinic is engaged. The increased patient census of this clinic necessitated its relocation in more spacious quarters.

The assignment of residents to the O.P.D. for training in the treatment of ambulant patients, both prior to hospitalization and for follow-up care after discharge, was furthered and now includes the following clinics: Surgery, Tumor, Gynecology and Obstetrics, Pediatrics, Psychiatry, Eye, Otolaryngology, Orthopedics, Dermatology, Urology, Neurology, Endocrinology, Hematology and Gastroenterology.

The more than 24,000 O.P.D. patients under care during the year provided a fruitful field for teaching and investigative work in practically all clinics.

Plans for further expansion of existing clinics and installation of more adequate facilities to improve operating efficiency await the modernization of the Out-Patient Department, the need for which becomes more apparent with each passing year.

While endeavoring to maintain a high quality of professional care, we also tried to meet each patient's problem with sympathetic understanding. Whatever degree of success we may have achieved was the direct result of the unselfish efforts of the many physicians, dentists, nurses, social workers, technicians, aides and volunteers who served loyally and well and to whom I extend my sincere appreciation and gratitude.

THE LABORATORIES

CHEMISTRY

THE Department of Chemistry recorded an increase in routine determinations performed from 77,800 in 1952 to 86,600, a gain of 11 per cent. These figures include over 3000 routine analyses of specific and complex nature performed by research units of the Nutrition, Enzyme, Endocrinology and Iodine Laboratories.

Among the new methods introduced was a rapid micromethod for serum calcium which was of particular value in emergency cases. The biuret method for small amounts of protein was modified, resulting in a ten to 20-fold sensitivity increase. Photoelectric colorimetric methods were established for the determination of three enzymes—amylase, trypsin and lipase—in blood and duodenal contents.

Physical and Organic Chemistry—Studies on the hydrolysis of phosphoric acid esters were continued, leading to unexpected conclusions regarding the reaction mechanism and to the discovery of a salicylic acid compound that is an improvement over most “soluble aspirin” preparations.

Proteins and Enzymes—A new project was begun dealing with albumin lipid complexes, the synthesis of which bears on the general problems of incorporation of lipid in protein solutions, a matter of significance both in microbiology and in tissue culture work.

The increase in thermic resistance of proteins produced by the addition of fatty acids was of interest in our work on thermophilic bacilli. We devised a basic synthetic medium for thermophiles and their mesophilic counterparts. Among the practical clinical applications of thermophiles is their usefulness in the microbiological assay of folic acid and vitamin B<sub>12</sub>.

Iodine Laboratory—The determination of protein-bound iodine gained in importance in assaying thyroid function, particularly in correcting errors inherent in radioactive iodine techniques.

Pancreatic Research Laboratory—The correlation among blood amylase, mucoprotein, antithrombin and secretin tests was studied, as were the relationship between phlebitis and pancreatitis, the electrolyte partition of human pancreatic secretion under the influence of stimulation, and the effect of carbonic anhydrase inhibitor on pancreatic secretion.

Diabetes Research—Studies dealt with the use of fructose in initial treatment of diabetic acidosis, its use in the pre- and post-operative management of the diabetic patient, and in the parenteral supplementation of extra carbohydrates in diabetic patients with liver damage; placental transfer of fructose from mother to child in normal and diabetic women; and the rate of decrease in blood potassium and phosphate with the administration of fructose versus glucose.

Electrolyte Research—Investigations dealt with the solid phase of the extracellular compartment as a factor in the maintenance of the composition and volume of the extracellular fluid. Other studies concerned the effect of desoxycorticosterone acetate on electrolyte metabolism and electrolyte alterations in experimental nephrosis.

Continuing studies on celiac disease, we carried out extensive experiments with the absorption of various sugars from the isolated duodenal loop and established a new relationship between sugar absorption and salt concentration.

Flamephotometric studies showed that fresh pituitary glands, in contrast to most other internal organs, contain more sodium than potassium.

The Physiological Chemistry Seminar included lectures on "Biosynthesis of Cholesterol," by Erwin Schwenk, Worcester Foundation; "Fat-Soluble Factors in Microbial Nutrition," Seymour Hutner, Haskins Laboratories; "A Model for Bioelectrical Phenomena," Theodore Shedlovsky, Rockefeller Institute; "Pentose Phosphates," E. Racker, Yale; and "Biochemical Studies on Steroid Hormones," Thomas F. Gallagher, Sloan-Kettering Institute. The Chemist to the Hospital was invited to give a paper before the International Microbiological Congress in Rome and presided at a conference on "Ion Exchange Resins in Medicine and Biological Research" at the New York Academy of Sciences. The Department participated in many other scientific meetings and issued many research subjects for the publications.

ENDOCRINOLOGY

THE research program concerned itself with the influence of the endocrine glands on extracellular compartment and total body water; the effects of thyroid stimulation hormone on adrenal cortical function; the influence of hormonal agents on tissue ground substance; chromosomal sex by skin biopsy; endocrine interrelationships in ovarian hyperthecosis; and the chemistry of the ground substance and the physiological significance of hexosamines.

The research team was comprised of assistants and fellows from hospitals and universities from many parts of the U. S., as well as from Israel, Italy, Argentine, Colombia and Turkey.

GASTROENTEROLOGY

OUR main effort was directed toward an understanding of the two-component mucus barrier, the mechanism which protects the digestive tract against the wear and tear of its daily activity. Studies were continued on various chemical characteristics of the protective mechanism's first line of defense, the mucus secretion itself. One approach concerned developing a chemical method to be used routinely for testing gastrointestinal patients for abnormalities in their output of this secretion. Another involved a quantitative study of the ability of the mucus layer to neutralize hydrochloric acid and protect the underlying cells against this irritant substance.

The second line of defense of the mucous barrier was also investigated. Circular defects were induced experimentally in canine stomach tissue by excising discs of the gastric mucosa of various diameters; the rate of repair of these defects in the layer of columnar cells producing the mucus was studied grossly and microscopically. The effect of Cortisone on the rate of repair was also investigated, along with several other pertinent factors.

Studies on the action of various pharmacological agents were carried on in an effort to find a new type of drug for ulcer therapy.

Studies on the intracellular processes of acid formation concerned the metabolism of the cell and its disruption by various enzyme inhibitors. Following the classical lines of ulcer therapy, clinical studies on the efficacy of Banthine and Pro-Banthine were continued.

Data on the essential chemical character of the external pancreatic secretion have been analyzed to determine the processes by which the sodium bicarbonate secretion of the pancreas is synthesized by the special cells of this gland.

A new technique was devised for studying the direct action on pancreatic juice of certain drugs and eliminating possible indirect action through the gastric hydrochloric acid-secreting mechanism.

The study of physicochemical factors affecting the form of gall stones in the gall bladder and biliary ducts was completed, and a paper prepared for publication.

Investigations were continued into the physiological and psychological factors in normal hunger and appetite, and the disturbances responsible for hyperphagia (overeating). A report showing the importance of neural factors in unrestricted food ingestion by dogs was prepared for publication.

A search was continued for the sources of potassium in gastric juice and the mechanisms by which it is secreted. The effect of carbonic anhydrase inhibition of gastric secretion by Diamox was extended to include potassium.

Papers were presented before the American Biochemical Society, American Physiological Society, and the XIX International Physiological Congress. Invitation lectures were given before the Physiology Seminar at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, and at the 102nd Annual Session of the American Medical Association in New York on "The Two-Component Mucous Barrier." Another invited lecture was given before the American Academy of Pediatrics on "The Physiology of Exocrine Secretion in the Digestive Tract." The Department served as section chairman in the "Conference on the Colon—Its Physiology and Therapeutics" of the N. Y. Academy of Sciences. Educational activities also included participation in the post-graduate course on normal and pathological physiology in affiliation with Columbia University, in the Laboratory's own monthly seminars, and also in those conducted by the Clinical Gastroenterology Group. The Laboratory staff comprised eight research associates and assistants in gastroenterology or surgery and five members of the Hospital attending staff. Included were a visiting investigator from Israel and one from Australia.

NUTRITION

A NUMBER of patients with idiopathic hyperlipemia were studied clinically and genetically in the Nutrition Research Laboratory. The clinical entities ranged from complete absence of symptoms to acute relapsing pancreatitis and included a syndrome characterized by marked elevation of serum lipids, minimal diabetes and severe vascular damage.

Studies in idiopathic hypercholesteremia were continued in Staten Island with the cooperation of the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York. Because the ethnic grouping differs from our Hospital population, this study will complement our previous work on this problem. Lipid studies on identical and fraternal twins were continued.

Investigation of lipid metabolism included fat-loading studies performed in relation to age and studies of the lipemia-clearing effect of heparin.

Other studies centered on the rehabilitation of invalids and semi-invalids with therapy-resistant sprue and on the metabolic abnormalities associated with it.

To complete the routine work described, paper-electrophoretic analyses of proteins and lipo-proteins of the serum were performed. A full-time resident in Nutrition and Metabolism was appointed and serves as liaison among the Hospital services, the Laboratory and the Nutrition Clinic.

Many distinguished guest lecturers participated in a seminar on nutrition and diabetes.

MICROBIOLOGY

THE routine subdivisions of the Department of Microbiology performed 38,380 bacteriological, chemotherapeutic, parasitological, serological, virological and mycological tests, an increase of approximately 15 per cent over 1952. The increase was due to the opening of the Klingenstein Pavilion, and was especially marked in the number of serological tests and in the number of time consuming guinea pig inoculations and cultures for diagnosis of tuberculosis.

A number of studies led to improvement and development of new routine techniques. Work on the cultivation of endameba histolytica was continued. Quantitative studies on the relation of the number of cysts in the stool inoculum to the incidence of positive cultures led to a recovery of the endameba in a high percentage of specimens. A mycology section was opened for routine examination of biological fluids and autopsy material for the presence of pathogenic fungi. A number of personnel and resident staff were taught routine procedures involving the detection of pathogenic fungi. As a result the number of pathogenic yeasts, molds and actinomyces isolated from clinical material increased sharply. Certain substances isolated from various animal organs were found to cause great stimulation of pathogenic fungi.

Techniques were instituted for the determination of antibiotic levels and bacterial sensitivity to erythromycin, magnamycin and furadentin as they became available and they are now routine procedures. A simple rapid test was developed and described for the determination of the antibiotic sensitivity of a large number of microorganisms to the available chemotherapeutic drugs. Using this test, a report on bacterial sensitivities can be made available to the clinician in from four to six, rather than the usual 18 to 24, hours, thereby greatly expediting the institution of appropriate therapy.

The use of an enzyme (RDE) for the removal of non-specific inhibitors of influenza hemagglutination reduced to a minimum the number of false negative results in laboratory diagnosis of influenza. New strains of influenza virus were added to the collection, thus increasing the sensitivity of determinations of influenza antibodies. A number of sera were tested for antibodies against Newcastle Disease Virus (NDV), to determine the significance of the antibodies in diagnosis of infectious mononucleosis and other conditions.

Further progress, reported in a series of publications, was achieved by the Department's research personnel. In conjunction with the Department of Pathology, studies were completed on the comparative antibody content in the serum and the rooster comb substance in immunized roosters.

Studies were begun on some of the factors playing a role in the development of bacterial resistance to antibiotics. Investigations were continued on the immunochemistry of ragweed extracts. Several constituents isolated by paper chromatography were further purified by paper electrophoresis.

Clinical studies aided by laboratory tests were continued on the treatment of schistosomiasis and amebiasis. Laboratory investigations were also carried out on the renal toxicity of bacitracin in white mice.

In view of the finding that pantothenic acid complements the ability of salicylates to inhibit the Schwartzman phenomenon, investigations were undertaken to determine the role of pantothenic acid in adrenocortical function.

Cultivation of poliomyelitis viruses in tissue cultures of human fibroblasts allowed propagation of all three types of poliomyelitis virus, with an early and uniform appearance of cytopathogenic changes, as well as production of viruses of high titer. The technique, now well-established, permits quick identification of antibody in human sera.

Extensive studies were continued of the effect of hormones on predisposition to poliomyelitis. A number of investigations were carried out on the anatomical, histological, biochemical and endocrinological aspects of the brown fat in hamsters. The relation of endocrine disturbances to susceptibility of the hamster to experimental paralysis was subjected to further analysis.

PATHOLOGY

A TOTAL of 8,780 surgical and obstetrical specimens were submitted for diagnostic examination and 2,314 preparations for cell diagnosis. The number of autopsies was 367, of which 29 were of the neonatal and 36 of the post-natal period. These necropsies included 210 examinations of the cerebrospinal system carried out by the Department's Neuropathologic Division.

In the first part of the year 11 trainees, and in the second part 16 trainees worked full-time in pathologic anatomy and surgical pathology. Eight of these physicians, approximately a third of those participating, are planning a career in pathology, while the rest entered the Department for a year as a preparation for their future clinical practice. Eight trainees were residents, ten were awarded fellowships by the Hospital, while four obtained scholarships for postgraduate training in pathology from the Dazian Foundation for Medical Research, Life Insurance Medical Research Fund, Government of Puerto Rico and the 20-30 International Foundation.

The number of applicants for training has been increasing and some of the applicants could not be accepted because of space limitations. It is evident that the Department's training program attracts many postgraduate students. In the summer months two undergraduate students took an elective course in pathology. Other medical students also applied, but because preference was given to postgraduate trainees, they could not be accommodated. The training is integrated with the routine work of the Department and the trainees learn by giving service to the Hospital. All the full-time senior members of the Department share in the educational program which is considered to be one of its basic functions. The Neuropathologic Division, as well as the Division of Pediatric Pathology, has a very active educational program in cooperation with the Neurologic and Neurosurgical Departments and the Departments of Pediatrics and Obstetrics and Gynecology, respectively. Residents of these departments were assigned for six-month periods to these divisions for special training in Pathology. Bi-weekly conferences were held, in which the respective clinical departments actively participated.

The routine and educational activities are of paramount importance, but as much time as can be spared was devoted to research. Research of the connective tissue continued, supported by grants-in-aid of the United States Public Health Service, as well as of the Life Insurance Medical Research Fund. Results of this research were published and also formed, in part, the topic of the first Ludwik Hektoen Memorial Lecture in Chicago, and of a Harvey Lecture in New York.

Studies of experimental atherosclerosis, with reference to the influence of adrenal hormones, were continued and are referred to in the report of the Department of Medicine. The effect of mercury bichloride in dogs was investigated and it was found that the mechanism of its action is a disturbance of homeostasis.

Histopathologic investigations of arteriosclerosis and constrictive pericarditis were continued and several reports published in medical journals. Histochemical investigations on a nuclear phosphatase were continued and expanded. Studies were completed on Wernicke's encephalopathy and diffuse cerebral sclerosis. A paper was read by invitation at the fall meeting of the American College of Cardiology on "Congenital Cardiac Malformations Associated with Mongolism."

As a final item of this annual review of the accomplishments of the department, it may be pertinent to report that in May one of our trainees, Dr. Daniel Leigh Weiss, was appointed Director of Laboratories of the Gallinger Municipal Hospital in Washington, D. C.

PHYSICS

THE clinical work of the Radiosotope Group levelled off. A total of 1,644 tracer doses of radioactive iodine were given, 2 per cent above the preceding year. The total number of therapeutic doses was 578, 40 per cent less than in 1952. There was, however, a great demand for the determination of the turnover of radioactive iodine in the blood—a technique developed by the Department—and 1,712 of them were done. This large volume of work had been made possible by the development of special scintillation counter techniques.

Radioactive phosphorus continued to be used for the treatment of polycythemia vera and leukemia.

In collaboration with the Radiotherapy Department, 23 patients were treated with intraperitoneal or intrapleural administration of radioactive gold.

Experimental and theoretical work on dosage delivered to tissues by  $\beta$  radiation from a number of radioactive isotopes was continued and the results have been applied by the Radiotherapy Department in the treatment of patients with Strontium-90.

A beam localizer and patient positioning techniques were worked out for use with the 400 kv deep therapy X-ray machine and a newly acquired rotating chair for rotational therapy.

Methods developed in 1952 for film processing control for the Diagnostic X-ray Department were introduced on a weekly routine basis in all of the Department's darkrooms. Continuous monitoring with film badges of X-ray exposure received by the X-ray personnel was continued; no excessive exposure was noted.

A nuclear counting apparatus (a scaling circuit) using magnetic computer components instead of electron tubes was completed and put in routine service, and appeared to fulfill its promise of greater reliability and ease of operation.

The following routine activities of the Physics Department, which had become service functions to the Hospital, were continued: X-ray diffraction analysis of renal and urinary calculi, microplethysmographic studies of patients with cardiovascular disease, standardization of radiotherapy machines, processing and standardization of radioactive isotopes for clinical use, and the maintenance of therapeutic, diagnostic and research equipment in various departments.

The decrease in the therapeutic load of the Radioisotope Group was due to a significant development in the radioisotope field. The Atomic Energy Commission began to release a limited number of radioactive isotopes (iodine among others) for use in the private offices of qualified physicians. All members of our radioisotope Group who applied received such authorization.

The widening of the application field of isotopes for medical practice, beyond institutional use, created a great demand among radiologists and internists for the required training and the Physics Department offered a three-month post-graduate course in the clinical use of radioactive isotopes, limited to a few students at a time. The course attracted applicants not only from New York, but also from out of town and abroad, creating a considerable waiting list. So far every student completing the course to the satisfaction of our instructors received the authorization of the Atomic Energy Commission.

It should be recalled that the Radioisotope Group was formed for treatment in O.P.D., and of hospitalized and private patients when radioactive isotopes were limited to institutional use. The Group trained additional members as work increased and has grown to be a nucleus of physicians in the community offering this specialized service in private practice. The Group is therefore now also able to train others.

The basic postgraduate course in Nuclear Physics and its application to medicine had 20 students. Laboratory work was added this year to the lecture sessions.

A discussion period with Radiotherapy Department residents was held four times a week, dealing with physical and technical aspects of the clinical use of X-rays and other types of ionizing radiations.

The year confirmed the high diagnostic reliability of radioactive iodine turnover studies in Graves' Disease on patients prior to treatment. But "false positive" results were obtained after treatment in a number of patients who appeared clinically cured. Work was begun to clarify the mechanism of this phenomenon, which might contribute to the understanding of the hormonal processes in hyperthyroidism.

A systematic study was initiated of the treatment of angina pectoris by radiation thyroidectomy.

A liaison physician from the Psychiatry Department worked in the Physics Department with hyperthyroid patients before and after treatment to gain insight into the relationship between the severe psychological disturbances of these patients and their somatic disease. It is expected that the results of this work will soon be ready for presentation.

A paper strip electrophoresis apparatus, built for the Endocrine Group, was used in the determination of serum protein fraction to which colloidal radioactive gold is fixed when it is administered to patients and enters their bloodstream. This has bearing on the question of gold uptake and excretion in the body, and on undesirable side effects. Related work was begun with radioactive Yttrium, which appears to be more suitable than gold for intraperitoneal use in diffuse spread of malignant disease, and might replace it in the near future.

Cooperative work was continued with Hematology on the use of radioactive iron in anemias and of vitamin B<sub>12</sub> tagged with radioactive Cobalt.

A mathematical theory was worked out on the pool distribution systems of iron in the body. Rather complex equations resulting from this theory were solved and applied to the experimental data, which appear to confirm the fundamental theoretical concepts and may permit generalizations to other than iron pool systems.

The apparatus built for the stimulation and action potential recording in the brain of experimental animals was used in a joint research project with the Departments of Neurosurgery and Neurology in a study of evoked potentials in the optical pathways of the cat.

A new problem presented to Physics by the Cardiology Department was the calibration and testing of clinical ballistocardiographs. To solve this, a mechanical oscillator generating a specially-designed wave shape was constructed. The oscillator permits simultaneous and independent examination of both the displacement and velocity pick ups of ballistocardiographs, their calibration in absolute units and the determination of their frequency response.

CARDIOGRAPHY

THE new and more spacious quarters occupied by the Electrocardiographic Department increased our efficiency and was a source of inspiration to staff members. In the last quarter, an average of 1,000 electrocardiograms were taken monthly, many of them 12-lead records for the medical wards. During the year, 254 heart sound tracings, 51 arterial pulse tracings, 610 "2-step" exercise electrocardiograms, and 345 ballistocardiograms were also recorded.

The "2-step" exercise electrocardiogram test developed by us gained still wider acceptance and research on it was continued.

Pulse tracings and heart sound tracings were made as requested by the ward physician or as deemed necessary by the Department to evaluate murmurs or abnormal pulsations in the chest. Important in congenital heart disease and mitral stenosis, the tracings were also useful to the combined research group interested in operations on congenital and acquired heart disease.

There was increased use of the ballistocardiogram, which is an adjunct to the conventional electrocardiogram and "2-step" exercise electrocardiogram.

Our blood pressure studies were directed to persons of 60 and over in an effort to determine normal blood pressure ranges in the healthy aged, the effect of age on blood pressure and other factors in the problem.

A study was conducted on the changes in the electrocardiogram before a coronary occlusion occurs and at its onset.

A comparative study was made of chest pain, the commonest symptom of coronary disease, as it occurs in coronary cases and in non-cardiac or functional instances.

In another study, overweight was found to be twice as common among men with angina pectoris, coronary thrombosis and hypertension than among average healthy males.

The investigation of cardiovascular disease in physicians was continued and will ultimately, it is hoped, be expanded to compare the findings with those on lawyers, bankers, engineers and other professional groups.

The intensive study of vectorcardiography was continued.

The Department continued to be active in teaching postgraduate students and interns. Six postgraduate courses were given, with a particularly good enrollment in elementary and advanced electrocardiography. A two-hour session in ballistocardiography was added to the electrocardiography course and was well received.

The American College of Physicians invited Mount Sinai to repeat in 1954 the course on recent advances in cardiovascular disease, which was first given in 1952.

A 16-week course in electrocardiography was given for interns. An electrocardiographic conference was held bi-weekly for the House Staff. There were several fellows attached to the Department. Plans were undertaken for a rotating course of training in the various cardiographic specialties. The Department was host to visitors from all over the globe and again our staff members were invited to lecture at meetings in many parts of the U. S.

HEMATOLOGY

THERE was a marked increase in the work performed by the Hematology Laboratories for all departments of the Hospital. The total number of services was 37,251, a 150 per cent increase over 1952. The increase may be attributed to an increased census and a growing awareness on the part of the Hospital staff of the type and value of the information provided by the Department. The Hematology staff conducted departmental and interdepartmental meetings, lectures and demonstrations for the resident staff, and ward rounds, illustrating the various indications and situations in which hematological determinations may be of clinical value. The Laboratory again sponsored a lecture series, "Seminars in Hematology," in which authorities in various aspects of hematology research participated. Attendance was exceptional.

Investigative work in the Laboratory expanded. Work was conducted on projects such as iron metabolism, abnormalities of hemoglobin, hemoglobin pigments and hemoglobinometry, polycythemia vera and allied disorders, hemorrhagic diseases and the coagulation mechanism, the hemolytic anemias and auto-immune mechanisms, and the megaloblastic anemias and the metabolism of vitamin B<sub>12</sub>.

A major advance was the development of a special section for the study of the hemorrhagic diseases. A close working arrangement was entered into with the Hemophilia Foundation, Inc. A program was formulated for the total management of hemophilia and related disorders, bringing together specialists in hematology, dentistry, orthopedics, psychiatry, pediatrics, and physiotherapy as an integrated unit to study and treat such patients. Within a year the Hospital has become a center for the treatment and study of these diseases, with a roster of some 40 such patients regularly attending the O.P.D., Emergency Room and the Laboratory. In addition, many other patients utilized the service on an emergency basis. The Laboratory has received for trial a variety of blood plasma fractions from the American Red Cross, the Michigan State Board of Health and the Boston Blood Laboratory. Such agents are not procurable commercially, and patients on various services in the Hospital have on various occasions greatly benefited from their availability.

Because many patients required urgent transfusions, the Laboratory in association with the Blood Bank established an ambulatory transfusion clinic in the O.P.D. There suitable patients may be transfused and returned home. This lightened the load of the Medical Service and saved hospital beds, while enabling patients to lead a more normal existence.

With the opening of the Obstetrical Service, the Laboratory began to provide special facilities for the study and treatment of hematological complications of pregnancy, and of newborn infants.

In recent years, increasing numbers of new drugs have become available for the treatment of leukemia and allied diseases. The Laboratory has maintained an active interest in this work and is the recipient of all the new agents introduced for that purpose. Although this type of treatment has yielded only amelioration of these disorders and some prolongation of life, the future appears more hopeful.

The Laboratory staff participated in the Graduate Fortnight of the New York Academy of Medicine on "Disorders of the Hematopoietic System," and received unusual recognition. Of the 20 major speakers from various sections of the country, four were from Mount Sinai. Hospital representatives presided at two of the six morning panel discussions and supplied members on the other panels. The afternoon clinic held by the Laboratory was well attended. The Laboratory set up an exceptional exhibit on disorders of blood coagulation and over 500 copies of a booklet describing it were distributed at the Fortnight. The exhibit was expanded for presentation at national meetings.

Publications forthcoming from our research, much of which was in collaboration with other departments, dealt with the use of stable and radioactive isotopes in the study of gout associated with secondary polycythemia; further studies in the mechanisms of the lupus cell phenomenon in systemic lupus erythematosus; the treatment of thrombocytopenic purpuras; hemolytic anemia due to drugs; unusual forms of leukemia; hemophilic-like diseases and others.

The Laboratory gave two courses for post-graduate students in affiliation with the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University and participated in the general survey course in medicine given by the Department of Medicine. The staff also gave a course in hematology to the professional staff of a Veterans Administration hospital and to the city Department of Laboratories.

The Laboratory now provides well rounded training to men of House Staff status as assistant resident and residents in the Department, and to more highly trained men as fellows. Some assistant residents and fellows in medicine spend part of their training period with us. By arrangement with the N. Y. U. College of Medicine, part of the clinical clerkship of its students may be electively spent full-time in our Laboratory.

The Department was hampered by insufficient space, but by the year's end this difficulty was in the process of being corrected.

THE SCHOOL AND THE DEPARTMENT OF NURSING

PARTICULAR emphasis was given during the year to the review of the School program, with the aim of assuring revisions necessary for the progressive educational development of the student. Consequently, the various faculty committees were unusually active initiating and implementing recommended changes. A case in point was the reallocation of teaching hours in the surgical specialties so as better to integrate classroom instruction and clinical experience. Another curriculum change transferred the content of the course formerly called "Social Problems" into areas of study where it will be more meaningful to the student. Clinical experience in pediatrics was increased from 13 weeks to 14, so that the assignment would include nursery school experience. Clinical experience records used by instructors and students were reviewed and revised better to fit our needs. Also, a manual of information on the use of these records was prepared by a faculty committee and all course outlines were revised and brought up to date.

One evidence of the success of the educational program was again the performance of our nurses in the State Board examinations. Last year 76 nurses took the examinations and all passed. One nurse became ill the first day of the examinations so could not complete them this year. In the past six years, a total of 420 candidates from the School took and passed the State Boards without a failure.

Eighty-seven students entered the School in 1953—25 in February and 62 in September. Fifteen accepted candidates withdrew before the date of entrance because, in most instances, they had lost their interest in a nursing career. Students were as usual attracted not only from New York, but also from states such as Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Wisconsin.

Seventeen entering students had completed one to three years of college. Six Murry Guggenheim Scholarships and ten Leonie and Murry Guggenheim Scholarships were awarded to new students. We lowered from 18 to 17 our minimum entering age because many eligible candidates for schools of nursing seem to be graduating from high school before 18 years of age.

Seventy-seven were graduated on February 6 at exercises held in the Blumenthal Auditorium, which were enhanced by a particularly enjoyable commencement address given by Robert A. Hardt, vice president of Hoffmann-La Roche, Inc.

In February, we requested the State Education Department to send a representative to the School to consider our plans for teaching obstetric nursing in the Magdalene and Charles Klingenstein Pavilion. Approval was given and the first group of students were assigned for obstetric experience on April 20. This was the first time in our long history that nurses were given obstetric experience in the home Hospital.

The School presented a collection of 14 unpublished letters of Florence Nightingale to Columbia-Presbyterian at the termination of our obstetric affiliation there. We were in return presented with a framed certificate declaring: "The high ideals of the Mount Sinai Hospital School of Nursing have been reflected in the care the patients have received in this unit of the Presbyterian Hospital in the City of New York."

A FULL social and recreational program was carried on by committees of the Student Association assisted by faculty members. Particularly popular extra-professional activities were the Student Glee Club, which participated in a choral festival with four other schools of nursing, sports activities, dances, teas and parties at the Oaks. Students also attended philharmonic symphony concerts, stadium concerts, the ballet and movies. All recreational facilities were made available through the Scholle Fund.

The student health program had a vital role in promoting positive health attitudes. A further strengthening of the program was achieved by conscientious faculty-student committee work. As usual, students received a full medical examination upon entrance to the School, complete care when ill, and a final health examination before graduation. To Dr. E. Z. Epstein, the School physician, and the consultants who gave much time and energy, go the warm thanks of the students, the graduate nurse staff and the faculty.

Added to the School orientation program was a tea for new students and their parents on the day of arrival at the School, at which they are greeted by members of the faculty and student representatives. This friendly event of welcome should prove to be an important factor in helping the new student to make a quick and satisfactory adjustment to her new environment.

Since student personnel policies are of the essence, we are happy to report that the first-year students' schedule was reduced to 40 hours a week as of Feb. 16 and that the same schedule became effective for second- and third-year students on Sept. 28.

Among the School literature compiled or revised and printed were the catalog, the student handbook, the graduate handbook, a handbook for practical nurses, a manual for night nurses, a manual for auxiliary personnel, and an orientation for professional nurses to auxiliary personnel policies. Orientation programs to each clinical area were revised, as were a number of nursing procedures.

Although a survey of the New York State Nurses Association showed 102 vacancies in instructional personnel in nursing schools, we were able to obtain the services of qualified faculty personnel to fill either vacancies or new positions arising with the expansion of facilities. Our losses in this regard were accounted for mainly by resignations following marriage.

Our faculty was represented at national and state nursing organization conventions. We were represented at a conference on curriculum sponsored by the State Education Department and the State League for Nursing at the New York Academy, and also in a regional conference conducted by the accrediting service of the League for Nursing held at Teachers College. A student represented the School at the meeting of Student Nurses Association during the State Convention.

As part of an inservice program, which is of importance to our staff, Kenneth Herrold, Ph.D., Director, Centre for Improving Group Procedures, Teacher's College, Columbia University, was engaged to carry on a program which stressed the importance of human relationships as reflected in the work of the nursing personnel. This proved to be a stimulating and valuable experience for our staff.

In December, we were informed by the accrediting service of the National League for Nursing that the program in nursing offered by our School was approved for full accreditation for 1954. The School was invited to have a re-survey because no such survey had been made since the School was originally accredited by the National League of Nursing Education in 1940. The Board of Directors and faculty welcomed this voluntary survey which took place the week of Dec. 7.

THE School suffered a grievous loss in the death of Mrs. Charles A. Wimpfheimer, a great and devoted friend dedicated to our purpose over a period of many years. Her passing was noted with sorrow by the directors, the faculty and by all who, with her, were friends of the School.

Mr. John R. Lehman was welcomed as a member of the Board and Mr. William J. Kridel was elected first vice president. The entire Board again served with distinction, addressing itself to all manner of problems with vigor and selflessness. It is cause for gratitude that Mr. George B. Bernheim, while retiring as first vice president, diminished neither his interest in the School nor his invaluable services in its behalf.

To oblige nurses from abroad who had requested graduate training in the Hospital, a Visitors Exchange Program for graduate professional nurses was established and approved by the State Department. A total of 33 nurses from abroad participated in the program last year.

Last summer was the first since the war in which the Department of Nursing did not request a reduction in ward census because of a shortage of nursing personnel. A number of policies instituted by the Board of Trustees of the Hospital were largely responsible for this improvement. Among them were the authorization of a $125 bonus to staff nurses (either with a year's service or more or upon attaining a year's service) who elected to vacation at a time that was in the interest of the Hospital and its patients. Also established was a tuition refund for new graduates of our School serving on the nursing staff for a minimum of a year.

There was a definite improvement in the nursing service and we were able to meet the demands made by the opening of several new services, including the Respirator Center, the premature nurseries, the post-operative recovery suite and, of course, the renovated Private Pavilion.

For a year of so much notable progress in both the School and the nursing service, we are indebted to many and especially to the continuing cooperation of the Board of Trustees of the Hospital and Dr. Martin R. Steinberg, its director, and members of his staff. Needless to say, the efforts of Miss Grace A. Warman, our director of the School and of nursing service, and those of her principal aides, Miss Minnie H. Struthers and Miss Bessie I. Wolfson, and of the entire faculty, were paramount in all that we sought to do and in all that we accomplished.

THE DEPARTMENT

THE death on Aug. 29 of Mrs. Fanny Mendelsohn, the Department's director for so many years, was a great loss to us and to the Hospital. Her devotion and leadership had helped build a service dedicated to the patient, seeing him as the human being he is. As a tribute, a Fanny Mendelsohn Fund was established by her co-workers in the Department, the Social Service Board and her many friends. But we could perpetuate no greater memorial in her name than to strive to build in the Department on the magnificent heritage she left us.

The esteem in which Mrs. Mendelsohn was held was attested by the manner in which everyone cooperated to carry on after her death. The Department's administrative assistant, Miss Elizabeth Dixon, assumed a particularly heavy burden. And we shall long be indebted to Mrs. Celia Moss, the social service director of Montefiore Hospital in Pittsburgh, who gave us as many days as she could muster from her own busy week to give us her guidance in this period. To Mrs. Moss, who had collaborated closely with Mrs. Mendelsohn in a thorough review of the Department, this admirable service was an expression of esteem for a departed friend.

On Nov. 16, Miss Doris Siegel assumed office as our new social service director, bringing to the post many years of outstanding experience as a hospital social service worker and executive and as a consultant to government agencies in Washington.

The study of the organization and function of the Department was completed by Mrs. Moss and submitted to the Hospital in May. The recommendations were studied by a joint lay and professional advisory committee representing the Social Service Department and Auxiliary, the Hospital administrative staff and the Medical Board. Many suggestions were implemented by Mrs. Mendelsohn, and action on others begun. The review, which took over a year to complete will continue to serve as a creative guide for further development.

An additional caseworker was added to the Obstetrics Service and a new position was created in the Premature Center, for both of which we are indebted to Mrs. Alfred A. Cook. A caseworker was employed for the Respirator Center through funds granted by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Centralized intake was instituted for the Eye, Skin, Genito-Urinary, Dental, Rectal, and Ear, Nose and Throat Services with good results. Consolidation of casework service to the orthopedic patient with one caseworker covering both ward and clinic also proved effective.

Changes in the Hospital and community affected our service. There appeared to be more older patients among our clinic population, requiring on the part of caseworkers more understanding of the social problems of the aged. Also, increased acceptance of home care for many patients lessened demands for convalescent home accommodations. The difficult living conditions of our Puerto Rican patients aggravated illness and created many social problems.

The development of the unit medical record combining O.P.D. and Hospital charts helped give the caseworker an understanding of the patient's total problem. Freer visiting in Pediatrics helped sustain child-family relationships. Within the Department, the discontinuance of 100 percent review on almost all services served to stimulate good referrals from physicians, nurses and other personnel. More work, however, needs to be done on this.

PROBLEMS requiring social casework continued to be varied, ranging from those of an environmental nature—poor housing, substandard incomes and the need for camping and convalescent and chronic care—to those having their roots in patient and family attitudes. The latter included difficulties in mother-child relationship, reaction to illness and handicaps, facing surgery and carrying out medical advice, and accepting limitation of activity. Through casework interviews and supporting relationships, the Department succeeded in helping many patients with these problems. As usual, excellent cooperation was maintained with the many community agencies outside the Hospital dealing with financial, family, after-care, employment and other problems. The Department is grateful to the Havens Relief Fund Society, the Cancer Philanthropic League and other generous groups for making possible some valuable additional services. Beyond the casework services, there were several group activities, including a club for colostomy and ileostomy patients. The club proved important to many of its members. A social worker also participated in a group psychotherapy clinic in child psychiatry and in expectant mothers' classes. Case aides demonstrated their value by releasing workers for more casework services.

Many needs in the community became apparent to our caseworkers in the course of their service. Our experience demonstrated clearly a shortage of facilities for treatment of emotionally disturbed children and adults, opportunities for employment of the physically or emotionally handicapped, housing, institutional and other services for the mentally retarded child, facilities for some types of chronically-ill, boarding homes for blind patients who do not adjust to the institutional setting, and day-care centers in some areas in the city. These gaps limited our effectiveness.

The Hospital itself could use occupational therapy for the Psychiatric Clinic, a play-room for children accompanying parents or being treated in the O.P.D., and larger quarters for the expanding activities of the Social Service Department. We may confidently expect the Hospital to meet these needs in the near future.

The social worker is one member of a team dedicated to the care of the patient and the Department worked closely with all other professional personnel. More physicians are coming to recognize the role of environment and family relationships in illness. Nurses now share observations on patients with the social worker. The relationship between the psychiatrist and social worker is closer than ever, abetted by the presence of liaison psychiatrists in all clinics and wards. Effective rapport was also maintained with the school teacher, the recreation worker, the Obstetrics Service and the Cleft Palate team. At weekly meetings of social workers and physicians, the medical-social needs of the patient are discussed and plans made for him. Another aid to teamwork has been attendance by social workers at various rounds. There is still, however, room for improvement in this area, particularly with regard to further orientation of the House staff.

THE Department participated in various new developments in the Hospital, establishing a social work position in the Respirator Center and contributing its thinking in relation to its social needs and services, and making a similar contribution in relation to the Premature Center. With the appointment of a full-time physiatrist in the Department of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, preliminary conferences were instituted, presaging more joint work, for it is essential that social factors be considered in the rehabilitation of the patient. On other services, particularly in the Adult Psychiatric Clinic, the social worker was consulted on plans and problems. Such participation is most desirable.

A unit of eight students from the New York School of Social Work was again placed for training in the Psychiatric Ward and Clinic. This program is in keeping with our recognized responsibility for helping to train workers. We believe this association, which is valuable for the students, also served to stimulate our own staff.

We continued to contribute to the training of our student nurses. In Obstetrics, for example, the social worker was available to the students for individual conferences and formal lectures. In the Medical Clinic, the social worker presented a paper on the social and emotional problems of the aged in a seminar on geriatrics. In Child Psychiatry, the group considered at four meetings the treatment of parents in a child guidance clinic. Emphasis on the teaching of the resident staff continued through participation in seminars by the liaison psychiatrist and through the participation of proctors of residents on the Psychiatric Ward in planning. Work done in relation to planning for case meetings with the Social Service Auxiliary proved to be an excellent educational process for our staff, as well as for the Auxiliary members.

The Department's staff meetings were continued and the staff bi-monthly "News-Letter" was an effective means of communication among the staff. Committee work continued and the supervisor at monthly meetings with her group considered many questions and helped in general staff development. Staff members, with the Auxiliary's support, were able to attend national conferences.

Members of the Department were delegates to the Welfare and Health Council sections on families and health, served on the Mental Health Advisory Committee to the Welfare and Health Council, and participated in various meetings of the New York Heart Association. Considerable activity in community planning was begun by Mrs. Mendelsohn with the Central Bureau for the Jewish Aged and the East Harlem Council for Community Planning, and it is hoped that it will be continued.

Our senior worker in child psychiatry was chairman for the year of the monthly regional meetings of the American Association of Psychiatric Clinics for Children. Many of our staff are members of the American Association of Medical Social Workers, the American Association of Psychiatric Social Workers and the American Association of Social Workers. A number served on special committees of those organizations.

THE HOSPITAL GIFT SHOP STAFFED BY VOLUNTEERS

The Department participated in a number of research projects conducted by the various services, including studies on cataract cases, uterine bleeding cases where etiology is not clearly determined organically, thyroid patients treated by radioactive isotopes, and tuberculous pregnant women.

Many new areas for activity are open to the Department. Implementation of additional recommendations in the review of the Department will be carried out and form a valuable framework for channeling our efforts. Our relationships with many agencies need to be cemented further. Internally, we must work on better coordination between clinic and ward workers and on easier communication within the Department. We must constantly appraise our services with a view toward possible improvement.

I am grateful for both the energy and intelligence of Miss Siegel on assuming directorship of the Department and for the splendid cooperation manifested by everyone in a most difficult period. Every effort will be made to build further, for the benefit of the Hospital and those who call upon it for help, upon the magnificent heritage left by Mrs. Mendelsohn. In this effort, the new director and the entire Department, I am sure, will find the various boards, the Hospital administration and professional staff not only willing, but inspiring co-workers.

THE AUXILIARY

BEFORE enumerating the activities and interests of the Auxiliary, I would like to start by stating its established purposes. It was started in 1916 to supplement the medical care provided by the Hospital by such services as will further the welfare of the patient and his family, and to render such other services to the Hospital as may from time to time be approved by the Trustees of the Hospital.

The Maternity Committee, of which Mrs. Alfred A. Cook is chairman, kept busy with new developments. A Babies Alumni Club was formed under its supervision, staffed by a part-time worker and nine volunteers. Every mother is invited to join the club and pay a dollar a year, although many contribute more. To date, we have received $2,361.85 from this source. Another activity in which the committee is interested is the premature clinic which accommodates 40 babies from all over the city. Layettes have been supplied by the sisterhoods of temple Emanu-El and Rodolph Sholom, for which we are most appreciative.

The Clothes Closet Committee, Mrs. Jack R. Aron, chairman, supplied 111 people with 736 articles of clothing. We are indebted to several groups of temple sisterhoods for making many of these items.

A Committee chaired by Mrs. Louis M. Loeb has been looking into relocation in larger quarters of the Social Service Department and it is hoped that in the near future we will have adequate space for the department to function more effectively.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Myron I. Borg, the Mount Sinai Hospital Women's Teams of the United Hospital Fund collected $40,239.09, a splendid achievement. We are grateful to the Fund for their financial assistance, and, of course, no report would be complete without expressing our appreciation for the support we receive from the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

A Special Committee headed by Mrs. Edward J. Rosenwald is studying the change of name and the structure of the Auxiliary.

We were delighted that two Hospital trustees, Mr. Robert Haas, and Mr. Harold Mayer, were appointed to serve on the Hospital board's social service committee. We feel sure that they will be of great value as liaison between the Auxiliary and the Hospital Board.

The Nominating Committee, Mrs. Joseph Cullman III, chairman, reported with regret the resignation of Mrs. Henry Siegbert who had served the hospital loyally and faithfully for many years. The Committee was pleased to announce the election of Mrs. Lewis Young in December to fill the vacancy. Mrs. William D. Scholle was elected corresponding secretary and Mrs. William M. Cahn, Jr. was elected assistant treasurer to succeed Mrs. Robert Kridel.

The Adult Recreation Program, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Victor Riesenfeld and Mrs. Jesse Asinof, started in 1952 as a pilot experiment in one ward, is now serving ten wards. There is a professional recreational director and there are 30 volunteers, many of them working girls who serve evenings. This certainly shows a splendid spirit. The program includes, games, movies, art instruction, diversional arts and crafts, musical strollers, variety shows, etc. There was a holiday party held in all the wards at which gifts were distributed to each patient. Music and entertainment was also provided. The patient reaction has been excellent. The staff, doctors and nurses have been most cooperative and pleased.

The Library Committee, Mrs. Edward J. Rosenwald, chairman, served adult patients throughout the Hospital, with the exception of the Klingenstein Maternity Pavilion, which we hope soon to be able to cover. The staff consists of one part-time paid worker and five volunteers. The book cart distributes books and magazines twice a week, covering approximately 440 beds. An average of 350 books and 650 magazines were distributed to about 500 patients a month. Magazines were also distributed in various clinics.

The Children's Committee chaired by Mrs. Arthur J. Cohen sent 109 children and six mothers to summer camp. There was greater family participation, with 29 of the 43 families paying part tuition and five families paying full tuition.

In the Pediatric Wards, more liberal visiting periods were instituted for parents. This helped physicians, nurses and social workers to know the parents and acquire a better understanding of the children in our care. The advantages to the children are self-evident.

Great interest was evinced in the Children's Recreation Program, which was headed by Mrs. William M. Cahn, Jr. A professional, assisted by ten volunteers, conducts this program. A party is held each month on each ward for all children who have birthdays during that month. Parties are also given for special holidays. The children enjoy selected television programs, such as the inauguration, the coronation, baseball games, etc. There is close cooperation between the pediatricians, psychiatrists, nursing and social service staff, as demonstrated by frequent interdepartmental meetings.

The Volunteer Department headed by Mrs. George Lee and Mrs. Robert H. Kridel, although no longer a part of the Auxiliary, still maintains a close affiliation with us. Volunteers are supplied throughout the Hospital, staffing the Gift Shop, the Babies Alumni Club, Recreation programs, and many other of our programs. Volunteers in 1953 contributed 41,328 hours—twice as many as in the previous year.

The Occupational Therapy Committee headed by Mrs. William Scholle labored for the better part of a year under the difficulties of a transition period, as occupational therapy ceased to be a function of the Social Service Department and was placed under the reorganized and expanded Department of Physical Medicine. Increased activity was anticipated by the committee in view of the vast new need for occupational therapy created by the opening of the Respirator Center.

The Education Committee, Mrs. Frank L. Weil, chairman, considered grants for staff scholarships, courses and conferences as well as gifts of appreciation to staff members retiring after years of loyal service. The committee also planned board meeting programs including talks by Dr. Martin R. Steinberg, the Hospital director, and by chiefs of services and department heads. Another committee function, with the assistance of the staff educational supervisor, was planning case meetings at which the staff and lay board members met to hear and discuss cases. A plan was being considered for providing orientation for new board members.

The Rehabilitation Workroom, Miss Edith Sachs, chairman, again demonstrated its value. Thirty-six patients attended during the year, nine men and 27 women. Of these, three women have already gone back into industry.

The "Green Box," which sells the Workroom patients' wares and thus helps support its program, was open from Nov. 9 through Dec. 29 and took in $9,200. Many persons not affiliated with the Hospital visited the outlet, examined the patient-made articles and expressed a keen interest in this rehabilitation activity, which is still the only one of its kind in the city in a general hospital.

The Gift Shop, headed by Mrs. Robert M. Benjamin, in its second year grew in popularity and usefulness. Visitors, patients and friends and personnel of the hospital patronized the shop increasingly. The year's gross sales were $37,952. The Gift Shop Committee and the Auxiliary are indebted to the 15 loyal volunteers who contributed so faithfully in time, hard work, and varied skills to the efficient operation of the shop.

None of the work of the Auxiliary could have been successfully performed without the cooperation and assistance of the director of the Hospital and his staff, the director and staff of the Social Service Department and the continued unselfish devotion of Auxiliary members. It was a source of great satisfaction to me to have the privilege of working closely with these various groups.

THE NEUSTADTER HOME FOR CONVALESCENTS

THERE was continued progress in convalescent care and still closer association between Neustadter and Mt. Sinai Hospital. The Home cared for 1,006 patients, gave 19,961 days of patient care, and had an average daily census of 54. The average length of stay was 21 days. Of the total, 959 patients came from Mount Sinai, with a decline from the Hospital's wards and O.P.D., and a rise in those from semi-private and private, and from outside sources.

We had 112 fewer patients than in 1952. Although this reflected a decline in convalescent centers generally, which is now being studied by the United Hospital Fund, we planned to undertake, for our own purposes, a program of further education among Mount Sinai physicians, who are our key referral source.

The cost per patient day rose to $9.64 as compared to last year's $8.92. The total operational cost was $195,783—a rise of some $10,000 over 1952. The year's deficit was $50,683.

The most important change in our clinical function was the admittance of a larger number of seriously ill patients, among whom were those who had undergone the newer types of surgery of the interior chambers of the heart, persons in the terminal stages of illness, and colostomy and ileostomy cases. Medical treatment in the Home was carefully integrated with the Hospital to provide continuity of care in the transition period. The appointment of a medical resident on part-time duty was a great help to the visiting staff and a great source of security to patients, the nursing staff and others.

By way of co-operating with the community in which we live, and also to help our census, we began taking patients from Yonkers hospitals. Through our visiting psychiatrist, arrangements were made to have the psychiatric sections of Grasslands Hospital and Bellevue admit emergency cases from Neustadter. There were occasional meetings held at Mount Sinai attended by Directors of the Home and physicians and nurses of the Home and Hospital. The meetings contributed greatly to the integration of our activities.

At the suggestion of our new social worker, we began experimenting with group therapy, and it appeared that this method might be quite successful in greeting and orienting new patients. The co-operation of our visiting psychiatrist and of social service personnel at Mount Sinai was of great assistance in this and related matters.

In accordance with personnel practices at the Hospital, a new salary schedule for non-professional help was adopted, and a bonus incentive instituted at Mount Sinai and extended to cover our nursing staff was a conspicuous factor in encouraging the staff to carry on despite the normal turn-over of nursing personnel.

The occupational therapy department continued to work in close association with the medical staff and social worker, and all patients able to participate were kept busy and contented. The seriously ill patients, whose activities were restricted, were entertained by outside performers. A recreation room was equipped in the basement with a radio and phonograph, table tennis, and other games for patients who are not television viewers.

A section of the physiotherapy area was converted into a social work office and another for the visiting psychiatrist. The offices vacated provided a suite for occupancy by our new medical resident.

As usual, the Home attracted many visitors, including Dr. John H. Cauley, Health Commissioner of Boston; Dr. James Stiefel, of Associated Hospital Service; representatives of the United Hospital Fund and the New York Heart Association. As part of their orientation, 60 student nurses and 39 House Staff members also visited the Home.

The Hospitality Shop was again a very popular part of the Home, equally enjoyed by the patients and their visitors.

The Home accepted with regret the resignation, after 15 years, of Mrs. Walter Hirsch, as president of Neustadter, and I know she has been greatly missed. I am thankful that she has remained on the Board, with her ever-ready and invaluable advice and intelligent judgment, which certainly meant a great deal to me in assuming the presidency.

We welcomed three new Board members, Mrs. Robert H. Kridel, Mr. Harold Mayer, and Mrs. V. Theo. Low, and feel fortunate in having them serve with us. We accepted with great regret the resignation of Mrs. Leonard Cohn, whose interest in occupational therapy made our department one of the best. Needless to say, we deeply mourned the death of Mrs. Fanny Mendelsohn last summer, for she stood for the very best in social work.

On behalf of the Board, I want to extend deepest thanks to all who helped in our work, including Dr. Martin R. Steinberg, Dr. Herman Zazeela, Dr. George S. Naumburg, Jr., and Dr. Jonas H. Sirota, Miss Elizabeth Dixon and the Mount Sinai Social Service Department. To Mrs. Edmonds a special word of appreciation for her most conscientious and efficient administration of the Home, and also our sincere gratitude to the entire Neustadter staff for their loyalty and interest in their work. My particular thanks to the Board of Directors, and to each and every individual Chairman of Committees for their loyalty and interest and support at all times.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR INVESTMENT IN MEDICAL RESEARCH

Although the exterior of the Atran Laboratory Building was completed early in 1952, it was not until the close of the last year that the Hospital was able to finish the interior and equip the entire unit for immediate occupancy.

The completion of the building for immediate use, before funds were in hand to pay for it, was necessary because the Hospital's laboratory services were urgently in need of the tools it was built to provide.

Additional contributions are needed to make up the difference between the cost of the building and the total of gifts made toward its construction. The Hospital therefore welcomes memorialization by donors in the new laboratory building of the following facilities:

Facility	Cost

The difference is the total philanthropic expense for the year .....	2,762,694
This philanthropic expense was met in greater part by generous grants from the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, the United Hospital Fund, the Greater New York Fund, the City of New York, etc., and income from general endowment funds, leaving a net deficit for the year of .....	628,090

* * * * *

An analysis of the cost included in the above total operating expenses of the Hospital revealed that:

Approximately $7,117,201 was spent in the care of 19,525 in-patients and 2,814 newborn infants. More than 43 per cent of the combined total was cared for as ward patients free or below cost.

Approximately $764,000 was spent in the Hospital's 94 out-patient clinics for care of needy patients.

Approximately $283,000 was spent for Social Service work for 6,116 patients, to help solve economic and social problems which prolonged illness so often involves.

The above operating expenses do not include approximately $991,000 spent for medical and scientific research, postgraduate medical education, and other projects not classified as annual maintenance of the Hospital. These activities are supported by funds which have been donated by generous sponsors and allocated for such purposes.

The years since the war's close constitute a period of unprecedented growth at The Mount Sinai Hospital in terms of new buildings and physical expansion of facilities and growth also in terms of exploiting for the community the full benefits of the rapidly expanding medical knowledge.

The expansion plans formulated by the Trustees in 1942 in anticipation of the war's end and the new responsibilities it would bring, are now realities. The broadening of the medical education program has benefited hundreds, including physicians returned from the Armed Forces and in need of reorientation. The Hospital's first maternity service is in operation. Scientists are at work in the Atran Laboratory Building and the Berg Institute of Research. A pioneer plan in psychiatry instituted in 1947 has become a model for the practice of psychosomatic medicine by a general hospital. Many other necessary expansions and innovations have been effected.

In the face of this growth, the Hospital has failed to maintain the strength of its financial reserves, which are its assurance of present security and future flexibility in the discharge of its responsibilities. In this expansion period, large deficits have drawn upon these reserves, accumulated in prior years, to the extent of $3,900,000. The Hospital, therefore, urgently needs, at this time in its history, capital funds for the further realization of its vital expansion program, capital and memorial donations, and legacies. It is upon such rebuilding of capital reserves that the well-being and future of the Hospital depend.

An Expression of Gratitude

THE record of benefactions to the Hospital which follows does not include gifts in support of new construction made through either the Building Fund of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York or the Mount Sinai-Montefiore Building Completion Fund. These will be recorded when the full lists become available. To all those who have so contributed, the Hospital meanwhile expresses its deepest gratitude.

Extracts from the Constitution on Establishment of Life, Memorial and Perpetual Beds and Other Funds

A contribution of $2,500 to the general funds of the corporation, if accepted by the Board of Trustees, shall establish a Life Bed. Such contribution shall entitle the donor thereof, during his or her lifetime, to name a patient from time to time to occupy one bed in the wards of the Hospital, free of charge.

A contribution of $3,500 to the general funds of the corporation, if accepted by the Board of Trustees, shall establish a Memorial Bed. Such a contribution shall entitle the donor thereof, during his or her lifetime, to name a patient from time to time to occupy one bed in the wards of the Hospital, free of charge. Such donor may bequeath that right to a successor appointed by the said donor in his or her last will and testament, or by any other instrument under seal. In the event of such successor being appointed, the rights hereinbefore mentioned shall continue for a period of not over fifty years from the date of such contribution, provided, however, that such period shall be extended so that it shall in no event end until ten years after the death of the donor. When a corporation is the donor, the privilege shall expire at the end of twenty-five years from the date of such contribution.

A contribution of $5,000 to the general funds of the corporation, if accepted by the Board of Trustees, shall establish a Perpetual Bed in the Children's Pavilion. Such contribution shall entitle the donor thereof, during his or her lifetime, to name a patient from time to time to occupy one bed in the wards of the Children's Pavilion, free of charge. Such donor may bequeath that right to a successor appointed by said donor in his or her last will and testament, or by any other instrument under seal. In the event of such successor being appointed, the rights hereinbefore mentioned shall continue for a period of not over fifty years from the date of such contribution, provided, however, that such period shall be extended so that it shall in no event end until ten years after the death of the donor. When a corporation is the donor, the privilege shall expire at the end of twenty-five years from the date of such contribution.

A contribution of $7,500 to the general funds of the corporation, if accepted by the Board of Trustees, shall establish a Perpetual Bed, but where, under the provision of any will executed prior to March 20, 1921, the sum of $5,000 or more is bequeathed to the corporation in payment of any Perpetual Bed, the Board of Trustees may, at their option, accept such sum in payment of such Perpetual Bed. Such contribution shall entitle the donor thereof, during his or her lifetime, to name a patient from time to time to occupy one bed in a ward of the Hospital, free of charge. Such donor may bequeath that right to a successor appointed by said donor in his or her last will and testament, or by any other instrument under seal. In the event of such successor being appointed, the rights hereinbefore mentioned shall continue for a period of not over fifty years from the date of such contribution, provided, however, that such period shall be extended so that it shall in no event end until ten years after the death of the donor. When a corporation is the donor, the privilege shall expire at the end of twenty-five years from the date of such contribution.

Tablets to commemorate the establishment of Life, Memorial, and Perpetual Beds shall be placed in a ward or in such other place as may be set aside for the purpose. Tablets for Life Beds shall be maintained during the life of the donor. Tablets for Memorial Beds shall be maintained for a period not beyond fifty years from the date of their establishment, provided, however, that such period shall be extended so that it shall in no event end until ten years after the death of the donor. Tablets for Perpetual Beds shall be maintained in perpetuity.

A donor may change a Life Bed established by him or her to a Memorial Bed by making an additional contribution of $1,000, or to a Perpetual Bed by making an additional contribution of $5,000, or may change a Memorial Bed to a Perpetual Bed by making an additional contribution of $4,000.

No patient shall be admitted to the privileges pertaining to a Life, Memorial, or Perpetual Bed unless he shall comply with the current rules of the corporation and be a proper subject for treatment under its regulations.

An endowment for the establishment of any special fund may be accepted by a resolution of the Board of Trustees. Such fund may be created for special or general purposes under the name of one or more persons or otherwise. If created for a special purpose the fund shall be used only for that purpose. Additions to any fund may be made at any time and in any amount, but no fund shall be created with an initial endowment of less than $10,000.

Gifts of any sums whatsoever may be made to one or more special funds for non-budgetary purposes, the principal and income of which may be appropriated by the Board of Trustees as the needs may arise for purposes not covered by the regular budget of the corporation.

In the case of a bequest which does not in all respects conform to the conditions herein set forth, the Board of Trustees may, in its discretion, accept the same in accordance with the provisions of such bequest.
